State Farm Bureau Celebrates 50th With Founder's Call To Order

HERSHEY (Lancaster Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau recently reminisced over the past several decades during a 50th anniversary conference and banquet at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center. Clay Shaw, 83, York, called the start-up meeting of the Farm Bureau, then the Pennsylvania Farmer's Association, to order on November 24, 1950. That meeting was attended by 32 farmers representing eight counties at the Brunswick hotel in Lancaster.

Fifty years later Shaw was honored to call the banquet and subsequent meeting to order. This time approximately 1,100 people attended. Shaw, who served on the farm bureau board for two years, presided over the first two organizational meetings years ago. He is the only living member of the original "founding fathers."

The events of the conference focused on acknowledging the foresight of the founders in addition to acknowledging the subsequent efforts of the thousands who have also served in the or-

Dairy Conference Reviews Importance Of Forage Quality, New NRC Book

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Dairy producers who rely a lot on forages should keep in mind that, in general, low-quality forages in the animal's diet will send energy values "substantially lower," according to an Ohio State dairy nutrition specialist.

And cows on pasture need more energy than cows on drylot, said Bill Weiss, Ohio State University professor of dairy science.

Weiss provided details regarding latest nutritional recommendations to more than 200 dairy feed specialists Tuesday. It was the start of a two-day Penn State-sponsored Dairy Cattle Nutrition Workshop at the Grantville Holiday Inn.

Overall, pastures provide a substantial source of Vitamin E, essential to boosting a ruminant's immune response and helping to keep diseases such as mastitis at bay.

"If you don't put up high-quality forage, it could cost you big bucks," said Terry Etherton, distinguished professor of animal nutrition and department head, Penn State Dairy and Animal Science.

Most experts agree that the cow's nutritional needs, along with providing a healthy environment, can go a long way in improving milk production.

Weiss, along with several Penn State dairy nutrition specialists, provided information on an update of the National Research Council (NRC) "Nutrient Requirements of Dairy Cattle" guide, a seventh edition and revision of the 1989 book.

The book is used widely to calculate nutritional needs of the dairy animal.

Much of the book includes important revisions, reviewed by several speakers at the conference.

For forage producers, a key finding of the revision committee was that "not all midbloom alfalfa is the same," Weiss noted. And feed by-products

Lancaster Farmland Trust Announces Senior Advisory Council, Launches Harvest Appeal

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Dr. John Schwartz, chairman, Lancaster Farmland Trust Board of Trustees, this week announced the launch of the trust's 2000-2001 Harvest Appeal to save Lancaster County farms.

He also released the names of nine well-known community leaders who will serve on the Trust's newly formed senior advisory council. Those members, in turn, serve as honorary co-chairmen of the Harvest Appeal.

The senior advisory council will function in an advisory capacity to the Board of Trustees and to the staff in matters of development, program planning, and community relations. The nine members are:

- Darwin Boyd, farmland preservation pioneer and agri-finance leader.

- H. Eugene Garber, retired major league baseball player, preserved farm owner, and former supervisor of West Donegal Township.

- Robert Herschok, retired 3M executive, entrepreneur, and owner of preserved farm.

- Dorothy Lyet, farmland preservation pioneer and recognized leader in Lancaster County Arts and Education.

- Carolyn S. Nunan, leader and benefactor in numerous

Genetic Foods Debate At Chester Extension Meet

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Those who attended the Chester County extension meeting had the opportunity to not only hear about county activities but also hear a debate about the controversial topic of genetic engineering.

Conducted at the Italian Social Club in West Chester, the meeting included an introduction of Chester County extension staff and an update on the county's 4-H center.

The evening's debate, with more than 80 in attendance, featured Paul Backman, director, Pennsylvania Agricultural Experiment Station at Penn State University; Terry Medley, West Chester, vice president of biotechnology regulatory affairs at Dupont; and Bill Freese, Washington, D.C., who represented environmental organization Friends of the Earth at the forum.

Backman said that biotechnology is needed for answers, pointing out that it has already helped solve problems. For example, said Backman, biotechnology has impacted environmental pollution as modified organisms help break down oil spills. Genetically-altered crops have decreased pesticide residues and specialized corn varieties may improve herd health.

Biotechnology, said Backman, may help to address animal, plant, and human health issues. Bioenergy may ease fuel price concerns and help alleviate concerns about the consumption of unrennewable re-

Processing schedules were light as operations continued to be reduced in line with fewer needs. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 55 to 69 cents. Trade sentiment was about steady. Wings and gizzards cleared satisfactorily. Other cuts were fully adequate or ample.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Wheat bids were mostly higher after good overnight export demand, including a substantial CCC donation purchase underpinned bids. More planting delays across Oklahoma and Texas also supported bids. Corn bids were lower for the third consecutive day, pressured by sluggish export interest and profit taking on the Board. Soybean bids took another jump higher with support stemming from recent strength in bean meal and reports that China purchased 115,000 metric tons of beans for 2001, but nothing has been announced. Wheat steady to 1 cent higher except Kansas City 1 cent lower. Corn steady to 4 cents lower. Sorghum 2 cents lower. Soybeans 3 to 8 cents higher.

Compared to last week: Feeder cattle and calves steady. Demand good for both classes with active trade. Quality plain through attractive.

Calves in slightly thin to fleshy conditions with more unweaned fleshy calves than last week. Feeder cattle in slightly thin to moderate flesh conditions. Weigh-ups average. Cool, often overcast, early November weather has slowed fall wheat growth but this having no effect on calf demand. Yearling cattle supplies remain tighter than normal. Fall season ordinarily has least yearlings of the year but this season has considerably less. Slaughter cows 2.00-3.00 higher. Slaughter bulls 1.50 higher. Demand good from packer buyers. Demand very good for thin cows to graze. Despite sharp increase in money, packers lost the majority of lean cows to grazing programs. Live slaughter cow prices are 4.00-5.00 higher than this time last year while slaughter cattle prices on hoof only 1.00 higher. This disparity reflects the lighter number of cows moving to market during this fall season. Total of 510 cows and bulls sold with 33 percent to packers. Receipts this week 11,135; last week 7180; last year 11,986.

Supply consisted of 37 percent calves and yearlings over 600 lbs; 58 percent calves under 600 lbs; 5 percent cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 45 percent of feeder and calf supply.

NEW MOON, NOVEMBER 25

OUR THANKFUL ALMANACS

What do readers of The Old Farmer's Almanac give thanks for? Our calendar pages offer a few popular sentiments: "Always leave something to wish for; otherwise you will be miserable for your very happiness," says one old adage. "The secret of contentment is the realization that life is a gift, not a right," reads another. There are warnings, too: "Make money your god and it will plague you like the devil." But perhaps Benjamin Franklin's advice sums it up best: "Be at war with your vices, at peace with your neighbors, and let every new year find you a better man"—or woman, we'd add.

Gratitude preserves old friendships and procures new ones.

TIP OF THE WEEK

If your hair tends to be oily, add a scant teaspoon of baking soda to your dollop of shampoo.

JELLIED CRANBERRY TURKEY LEFTOVERS

1 can (16 ounces) cranberry jelly
1 cup cold water
1 package (3 ounces) cranberry gelatin dash of salt
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
1 cup cold water
1 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup evaporated milk
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup chopped celery
2 cups chopped cooked turkey

Mix cranberry jelly and 1 cup water, bring to a boil. Add cranberry gelatin; stir to dissolve. Season with dash of salt, then chill until set in a lightly oiled 3-quart glass dish. Soften unflavored gelatin in 1 cup water in top of a double boiler, heating until dissolved. Add mayonnaise, milk, salt, and celery. Pour over set cranberry layer, add chopped turkey, and chill until set.

Makes 4 servings.

Candidates Should Ignore Rural And Farm Issues At Their Own Peril

Whichever way the extremely close presidential race goes, it is clear that farm and rural votes proved critical in this razor-thin election, said Truth About Trade and Technology, a nonpartisan, pro-trade and technology farm group.

"We were saying all along that farmers and rural voters in America's heartland would prove crucial in this election and this election proved that every vote was critical," said Dean Kleckner, chairman of Truth About Trade and Technology and former head of the American Farm Bureau. "If we need any evidence to prove the importance of these voters, we can just look at the fact that states like Iowa and Wisconsin, heavily populated with farmers and rural voters, were still up for grabs very early into the morning hours."

"As we traveled to many heartland states during these past few weeks, we told farmers that this was the most important election in a generation," Kleckner said. "We told them it was critical that they get out and vote and that they pay careful attention to where the candidates stand on the critical issues to America's rural and farm communities."

"On a whole slate of issues, the choices were clear to our communities," Kleckner said. "Will the farm economy be revitalized by expanded trade or stifled by fear and protectionism? Will sound science or scare tactics prevail in the debate to protect the environment? The answers to these questions will determine the fate of the farmer and the families of rural America. The razor-thin margins in many of America's heartland states must send a message that candidates will ignore these issues and voters at their own peril."

Farmers are often told they have no political clout. But this election proves every vote counts.

To comprehend reality, just consider this: With millions of votes cast, the next president of the United States will likely get into office on the strength of several hundred votes.

Who says the farm vote doesn't count?

To Use Caution When Cleaning Cabins

As people head out to deer camps or cabins this fall, they will want to take some precautions to safeguard themselves against hantavirus, according to Dr. Gary San Julian, Penn State professor of wildlife resources.

Hantavirus pulmonary syndrome is a rare but potentially fatal lung disease. There have been three cases, of which two were fatal, in Pennsylvania since 1997. Thirty eight percent of the individuals reported to have contracted the virus nationwide have died.

There is cause to be careful, but do not panic.

Public education has reduced the number of reported cases. Several species of wild rodents, such as the deer mouse and the white-footed mouse, have been linked to the virus. You could be at risk when doing anything that puts you in contact with rodent droppings, urine, or nesting materials. Because the virus enters the lungs through contaminated dust, you should avoid touching rodent droppings and raising dust. The symptoms of the disease are nonspecific and include fever, fatigue, and muscle aches.

Patients also may experience headaches, dizziness, chills, and abdominal problems. Symptoms may begin one to five weeks after exposure.

If symptoms occur, check with your physician and mention you may have been exposed to rodent contamination. In later stages, four to 10 days later, patients experience coughing and shortness of breath.

To Clean Hunting Cabins Properly

The following recommendations for prevention and control of hantavirus are offered by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) when cleaning cabins and deer camps.

- Keep rodents out of cabins and camps by blocking holes and filling cracks.
- Wash all dishes and utensils with hot, soapy water.
- Store food in rodent-proof containers.
- Air out buildings for at least 30 minutes before you start cleaning.
- Wear rubber gloves.
- Spray all materials and surfaces

A BOX TO PUT GOD IN

Background Scripture:
1 Kings 5:1-8; 6:1-22, 37-38; 8:4 through 9:5.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 84:1-4.

If Solomon was known far and wide, then and now, for his wisdom, the second thing for which he is best remembered was the temple he built in Jerusalem. When it was completed, it would be known for all time as Solomon's Temple.

We have previously seen that God did not want David to build him a temple. Now, however, Solomon was not only permitted to do so, he was encouraged to begin this great project.

Why was David forbidden and Solomon commanded to do so? We do not know, but perhaps it was because the people of Israel erroneously thought of the temple as the place where God dwelled. So maybe the people were ready to think of it not as a place God lived, but where they could come to worship the Lord.

We are told that the building of the temple lasted seven years. The number seven was sacred among many of the Semitic peoples, as well as others. Although originally four had been the favorite holy number of Egypt, seven gradually replaced it. In Mesopotamia, seven was holy from the earliest times.

Seven was even more important for the people of the Old Testament: seven days was the length of many of the festivals, such as the Passover and Feast of the Tabernacles; the Day of Atonement, New Year, and Tabernacles all occur in the seventh month; the Feast of Weeks was based upon the square of seven and seven days was the period of ordination for priests and consecration of altars. In the Temple there were seven altars and the blood of sacrifice was sprinkled seven times.

The seventh day was the completion of creation and basis of the Sabbath observance. Seven-branched candlesticks are mention in Revelations and also seven stars and seven churches.

So the completion of the Temple in seven years signifies the tremendous importance it would have in the life of the people.

Where Will God Dwell?

When the Temple was consecrated, in his prayer, Solomon asks: "But will God indeed dwell on the earth?" (8:27). Considering that the Temple is now completed, you may think that Solomon waited pretty late to raise this question.

I believe he raises it again for the sake of the people, so that they understand that no building made by human hands can be the dwelling place for the Lord of the universe.

"Behold, heaven and the highest heaven cannot contain thee; how much less this house which I have built."

The Temple was a meeting place with God, but not the dwelling place of the Lord. God cannot be contained within four walls. The Lord is not restricted by anything that human beings can devise or build — buildings, churches, denominations, creeds, rituals, and so on. We cannot put God in a box of our making. We may find him there, but we cannot restrict him to it.

I cannot help but think of the little boy who charged admission to the children of his neighborhood to come into his backyard to see the eclipse. Isn't that our mindset sometimes: come into my denominational, confessional or ritual backyard so that you can find God?

We can find God — or be found by him — in a holy place, but he is not limited to it. The holy place is designated, not for God who doesn't need it, but for us. It is a place where God seems more real, more present to us. That may be your church or it may be the Grand Canyon — (wet thoroughly) with a general-purpose disinfectant or detergent where droppings and urine are suspected. Most general-purpose cleaners will do the job. For large areas, use a 10 percent household laundry bleach solution (1.5 cups of bleach per gallon of water). Pick up the wet material with a damp towel, then mop or wipe the area with disinfectant.

• When finished cleaning, bury or burn materials if feasible. Disinfectant your gloves before removing them. Then wash your hands with soap and warm water.

To Segregate Grains

With the introduction of GMO (genetically modified organism) crops and the position some parts of the world have taken on their use, grain producers need to keep asking themselves, "do I have grain that I need to keep segregated?"

According to Shawn Shouse, Iowa State University, a combine even after a thorough cleaning can contain 50 or more pounds of corn. In order to segregate grain adequately for world sales, producers need to flush their combine with a minimum of 60 to 70 bushels of grain in order to reduce contamination levels to less than one percent.

Contamination may come from several sources, including cross-pollination, seed impurities, planting and harvesting equipment, and transportation and storage equipment. Farmers expecting to sell in the international market should check for the latest requirements from the dealers they are selling to.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "If you are not selective, you are not effective."

wherever God can break through to us, that is a holy place.

Holy Places

In taking people to the Holy Land, I have frequently been asked, did Jesus actually pray there or is this really the place where he experienced the Last Supper?

Some of those holy places are more likely than others, but I believe others have been made holy, not by what did or did not happen there, but the devotion with which Christians have responded there.

I like to think that the Church of the Nations in Gethsemane is really the place Jesus prayed on the night he was betrayed. But, if it is not the exact place, it doesn't matter, for it is been made a holy place for millions of Christians who have felt his presence there. The prayers of sincere Christians help to sanctify many 'holy places.'

Another indication of Solomon's superior wisdom was his understanding of human nature. At one point (8:46) he prays: "If they sin against thee — for there is no man who does not sin . . ." asking the Lord for forgiveness for the people if they truly seek it. This verse surprised me, because I did not realize that someone so early in the religion of Israel realized that "there is no man who does not sin."

In Jesus' time there were those who acted as if they were without sin. Since Jesus' times Christians have sometimes thought in terms of those who sin and those who do not. But Solomon knew that neither God nor his children can be put into little boxes.

The JUG Livestock Waterer Cleans Itself - so you don't have to!

The JUG'S self-cleaning design
The JUG'S Feed-Trap™ design prevents feed and other debris from entering the reservoir tank. Each time the animal drinks, any debris in the Feed-Trap is removed. The tank stays clean!

No Algae - No slime
Since the JUG's reservoir is light-tight, no algae will grow in it. That means no slime build-up.

Clean Water = productivity
You know that animals will drink more when the water is clean. And more water consumption yields more productivity.

Tough, long-lasting construction
The JUG is made of tough, roto-molded plastic. It stands up to abuse dished out by livestock. It won't chip and pit like concrete.

Buy your JUG today!

Milk Promotion Becomes Official Sponsor Of Major League Soccer

ROSEMONT, Ill. — Dairy Management Inc.™ (DMI) which manages the national checkoff on behalf of America's dairy producers, and MilkPEP (Milk Processor Education Program), have signed a partnership agreement with Major League Soccer (MLS) that makes milk the "Official Sponsor" of MLS and its 12 teams through the 2001 season, with exclusive renewal options.

The fluid milk industry's first-ever sponsorship of a professional sports league began at the MLS All-Star Game in Columbus, Ohio, including "got milk?" identification on the East all-star team's jerseys. Dairy promotion will participate in MLS national grassroots initiatives with U.S. families in order to help emphasize the nutritional value of milk. In addition, starting in 2001 dairy promotion can use MLS players in the national "got milk?" advertising campaign.

"Milk is nature's original power drink. It has calcium to help build strong bones, plus eight other essential vitamins and minerals for active bodies," said Linda Racicot, DMI executive vice president, domestic marketing. "This sponsorship provides an excellent opportunity to educate thousands of moms, dads and kids that milk should be an important part of their training regimen."

"Soccer is quickly becoming America's family sport. We welcome the opportunity to educate parents and children on the importance of a balanced, nutritious diet that includes milk," said Kurt Graetzer, vice president of MilkPEP.

As an official sponsor of MLS, the dairy industry will receive full marketing and promotional rights as a member of the MLS corporate family.

MMB Announces October Class I Price

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Milk Marketing Board (MMB) announced the prices to be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers for October Class I milk (beverage) at an average of $15.54 in the western areas of the Commonwealth, and an average of $16.03 in the central and eastern areas of the Commonwealth. However, the price received by an individual dairy farmer will vary as the component composition of a farm's milk differs from the established benchmarks of 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids.

These prices include the current over-order premium of $1.00 per one hundred pounds of milk, and the fuel adjustment premium of $.25 per one hundred pounds of milk.

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — Fourteen dairy cows with six dairy breeds represented were exhibited at the Montgomery County 4-H Fair in Creamery. Don Gable of Elverson, PA judged the cattle and showmanship contests.

This year's supreme champion of the show was a 3-year-old Holstein, Hallowell's Richard Joy, exhibited by Amber Hallowell of Bechtelsville. An antique gallon milk container representing milk from the supreme champion was auctioned off to the top bidder, Rosenberger Dairies of Lansdale, for $395 as part of Montgomery County's Market Animal Sale. Proceeds from the milk container are split between Amber and the Montgomery County 4-H Dairy Club. The junior supreme champion was a spring yearling, Hallowell's Patron Blue, exhibited by Amber Hallowell of Bechtelsville.

Holsteins exhibited by Amber Hallowell of Bechtelsville were the Holstein grand champion and reserve grand champion, respectively. Grand champion for the five colored breeds are as follows: Ayrshire, Aaron Heiser of Royersford; Brown Swiss, Chris McGinnis of Souderton; Guernsey, Adam Lutz of North Wales; Jersey Cheryl Lutz of North Wales, Chris McGinnis; Milking Shorthorn, Kevin McGinnis. Corey Yoder and Adriel Leatherman both first year members exhibited grade animals in their first ever show.

For the junior 4-H's Corey

Yoder of Royersford and Cheryl Lutz received fitting and reserve fitting awards. Junior showmanship awards went to Adam and Cheryl Lutz. Intermediate 4-H's Amber Hallowell of Bechtelsville and Kevin McGinnis of Souderton received fitting and reserve fitting awards. Showmanship champion and reserve champions went to Amber Hallowell and Kevin McGinnis. In the senior 4-H class, Sean Hallowell and Chris McGinnis were first and second place in the fitting while Chris McGinnis was first in the senior showmanship contest.

All participants of the 4-H dairy show were required to complete a project book for each animal. The 4-H dairy experience helps teach the basics in how to care for animals and the economics involved with raising dairy animals. For more information on Montgomery County's 4-H dairy program, contact Lou Saporito at (610) 489-4315.

Snyder Wins International Championship

LANSING, Mich. — "Gibraltar," an 8-year-old Texas Longhorn steer, showed his style by winning the All Age International Championship Steer division of the International Texas Longhorn Association Show. He is owned by Robert Snyder of Columbus, Ohio and Dickinson Cattle Co. Inc. of Barnesville, Ohio.

Gibraltar sports 88 1/4-inch horns tip to tip with a serpentine shape. His total horn growth pole measurement is believed to be over 128-inches. Longhorn steers continue to grow horn and may live to be 19 to 25-years-old.

The International Championship Show was held at the Michigan State University Livestock Pavilion for cattle qualified by winning regional shows. The Annual International Championship Show and Convention is the major event of the ITLA and the Great Lakes Texas Longhorn Association.

Gibraltar has won numerous shows in the last two years. Big-horned Texas Longhorn steers like Gibraltar are shown loose at Longhorn shows. A loose class, very popular with Longhorn shows, is for very correct conformation cattle with naturally good posture. No show person can hold their heads up or move feet with a show stick.

Americans Celebrate Farm-City Week

NAPERVILLE, Ill. — Americans from all walks of life will come together in gatherings large and small during the next few days in celebration of National Farm-City Week the period beginning Nov. 17 and ending with the traditional U.S. Thanksgiving Holiday.

Farm-City Week is an organized effort to bring rural and urban residents together in social settings to stress their interdependence.

"During these few days we will see Farm-City events large and small," explains National Farm-City (Council) Chairman Gene Hemphill of New Holland, Pa.

"These might be as simple as a Kiwanis Club inviting local farmers to a breakfast or luncheon program. Or, it may be as large as an entire community coming together with visits to farms, petting zoos, rural-urban job exchanges, and local producer organizations sponsoring banquets. The entire purpose is to bring farmer/producers together with urban consumers."

On Nov. 21 in Baton Rouge, La., local radio stations will broadcast "remotes" from the Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation offices in a "Marathon Against Hunger." The public is invited to donate food that will be given to the Greater Baton Rouge Food Bank. The effort is being spearheaded by the staff and the Women's Committee of the Louisiana Farm Bureau.

The Farm-City Committee of Alabama sponsors statewide essay and poster contests with the basic message being that without the farm, families would not have food, clothing or shelter. Working in conjunction with the Alabama Ag in the Classroom program, cash prizes are awarded and the top poster entries are featured in a full-sized color calendar distributed across the state.

"Too many people have forgotten that food

He was shown loose, which is typical of most Longhorn shows. He is owned by Robert Snyder of Columbus, Ohio and Dickinson Cattle Co., Inc. of Barnesville, Ohio.

Joel Dickinson of Dickinson Cattle Co., Inc. uses a push broom to put the final touches on Gibraltar, who minutes later won International Champion All Age Texas Longhorn Steer at the 10th Annual International Texas Longhorn Association Convention and Show held at Michigan State University Livestock Pavilion. He was exhibited by Robert Snyder of Columbus, Ohio and Dickinson Cattle Co. Inc. of Barnesville, Ohio.

ganization. Pennsylvania is the 46th state to join the Farm Bureau Federation.

A former president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau and current state senator, Noah H. Wenger received the Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award. "I've seen a lot of changes in agriculture," said Wenger, who served as president 35 years ago. "You've built on and strengthened the industry. That goes to show what can happen when a group of farmers pull together."

Wenger recognized the challenges to the agriculture industry today in the environmental concerns, legal issues, and animal rights obstacles to farming which were not present years ago. In view of these obstacles, he said, "Pennsylvania agriculture needs a voice in legislature. I believe you are up to the challenge to providing that voice," said Wenger.

The all-star award went to a county that excels in 18 categories. Susquehanna County took home the 2000 all-star designation.

Other finalists in the achievement award include Joshua Grim, Lehigh County and Alan and Denise Taylor, York County.

Winners of the discussion meet and the achievement award received $500 from Dodge truck plus a trip to Orlando, Fla. to compete in national competition.

The conference wrapped up with an election of leaders to serve on the board of directors replacing those directors who met tenure this year. Representing District 2, Lehigh County, will be Arland Schantz, Zionsville; District 6, Centre County, Marlene Reese, Port Matilda; District 10, Perry County, Jay Witmer, Liverpool; and District 12, Clearfield County, Leon Kriner, Du Bois.

Delegates deliberated and made decisions on the organization's policies on farm issues such as environmental issues, dairy and other farm commodity concerns, taxes, the vehicle code, research and future trends in agriculture.

Many government officials recognized the farm bureau's anniversary. Rep. John Barley, Lancaster County, chair of the appropriations committee, read an official citation from the Pennsylvania House of Representatives to recognize the Farm Bureau's 50th anniversary.

In addition Secretary of Agriculture Samuel E. Hayes read a message from Tom Ridge to commemorate the occasion.

Hayes called Sen. Robert Jubelirer of Holidaysburg, Blair County, the Senate President Pro Tempore, to the podium for remarks.

"It's good to see the support you offer to a great industry to honor Noah Wenger, who sets the standard all of us try to achieve. His is a voice of agriculture in the general assembly. He's well-respected and someone everyone listens to," said Jubelirer.

Sen. Jubelirer also recognized the efforts of the members and government representatives in the audience. "There are many, many others here tonight who also work very hard for Pennsylvania agriculture," he said.

Hayes thanked members of the general assembly, pointing out that Pennsylvania government and legislators provided the number one drought assistance package in the nation for producers. Hayes also cited Plum Pox help, farm show renovations, farmland preservation, and Pennsylvania Animal Diagnostic Laboratory as examples of Pennsylvania government's commitment to agriculture.

Hayes also recognized the hard work of the Pennsylvania producers. "You provide food, fiber, and shelter for all of us, and in this Thanksgiving season, I'm thankful for all you do," said Hayes.

Besides a commemorative pin, banquet attendees received a book highlighting the people, places, and issues pertaining to the history of the Farm Bureau.

Four outgoing board members, Clarence Berger, Kintersville, Bucks County; Donn Fetterolf, Aaronsburg, Centre County; Wayne Freeman, Ellitsburg, Perry County; and Jerome Carl, Dysart, Cambria County, were recognized for their service to Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

Other conference events included a Young Farmers and Ranchers discussion meet. The four finalists displayed their communication skills and grasp of agriculture by analyzed and presented their ideas on a solution to an agricultural problem. Andrea Semmel, Schnecksville, Lehigh County, won the competition. The three other finalists included Paul Hartman, Berks County; Michael Braucher, Berks County; and Marie Sipler, Lancaster County.

The Young Farm and Rancher Achievement Award was also announced. Oscar and Marie Sipler, Lancaster County, won the award. The Siplers recently expanded their dairy herd and moved to the Lititz area. They milk 100 head and have 112 heifers.

Penn State Collaborates On Regional Pest Management Center

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, in collaboration with Cornell University, will administer the Northeastern Pest Management Center, an initiative by the USDA to bring together specialists from 12 states and the District of Columbia to develop and deliver alternative and safer pest management strategies.

"Each center will act as a connection between agricultural producers, university researchers, extension specialists and other agricultural professionals," said John Ayers, Penn State professor of plant pathology and center director.

Jim VanKirk, facilitator for IPM activities, Cornell University, is center coordinator.

"This is a center without walls," said VanKirk. "We hope to involve many kinds of people — from farmers, government regulators, and homemakers to environmental advocates." VanKirk envisions the center contributing to pest management solutions on farms as well as in community settings, such as schools and parks.

The Northeast region includes Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Massachusetts, Maine, New York, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Vermont, Rhode Island, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia.

Each center will develop cooperative partnerships among colleges, universities, and crop production experts from states within each region. Three other pest management centers are located in other regions of the U.S. They are north central, coordinated by Michigan State University and the University of Illinois; western, coordinated by the University of California at Davis; and southern, coordinated by the University of Florida.

"Each center will establish a pool of shared expertise, reducing the duplication of effort that is commonly seen in pest management projects or problems that cross state boundaries," Ayers said.

"By creating a regional model that coordinates expert information, technology and education, we can better serve farmers, other agricultural producers, federal and state agencies, and agribusinesses."

Ayers said some of the issues to be addressed by the regional centers will include regulatory restrictions, pesticide resistance, and invasive species.

Plans For Grant Money For Dairy Producers

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Grants up to $1,500 are available to eligible dairy producers through the Business Planning Assistance Program of the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders. A special grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is allowing the program to continue beyond its inaugural year.

The goal of the Business Planning Assistance Program (BPAP) is to encourage and stimulate the development of business and strategic plans for dairy producers.

Planning for the future is vital to a successful dairy operation, and often requires the services of a professional.

Participants in the BPAP must be existing or start-up dairy farms within the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and must be accepted into the program. Proceeds from the grant may be used only to cover the cost of having the professional services necessary to assist the applicant in evaluating a Pennsylvania dairy farm business.

Approved services could include the preparation of a feasibility study or business plan, managerial services, or other services associated with planning and business management. Ineligible services include: routine accounting and tax preparation, feed ration development, crop services, or other production-related areas.

The initial funding for the Business Planning Assistance Program came from a grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, matched by dairy industry contributions.

To date, 19 business plans have been completed for a total grant support of over $25,000 paid to producers in the state. Although the BPAP can provide 75 percent of eligible project costs up to a maximum of $1,500, the actual amount of the funds awarded to any applicant is based on factors such as viability of the project, economic impact, and fund availability. Successful applicants will be required to contribute at least 25 percent of the total project costs from their farm business.

Any producer interested in applying for the Business Planning

does not just come from the grocery store; that the cotton in our clothing was grown in a field," Hemphill noted.

"Urban folks need to have a better understanding of the challenges facing farmers and ranchers. At the same time, our agricultural producers need to recognize that our urban consumers are partners and that we all enjoy the safest and most abundant food supply in the world."

National Farm-City Week was established in 1955 through Kiwanis International as an effort to maintain farm-city relations as America became more urbanized and the farm population began shrinking. Today there are Farm-City organizations in 49 states, driven primarily through extension offices and local Farm Bureaus. The role of the Council is to coordinate national promotion of Farm-City Week.

"Despite the fact that we have only around 2 million active farmers, on a national scale more than 24 million people today work in the food and fiber system," Hemphill explained. "These include the producers, the transporters, the processors, wholesalers and retailers — literally from the farmer who grows it, to the waitress who serves it and the clerk who sells it."

Earlier this year country music entertainer Louise Mandrell put her support behind the Farm-City effort by becoming honorary chairman of the Council.

Although Mandrell and her famous sisters grew up in the Los Angeles area, she is quick to note that she now lives on a 500-acre beef farm near Pigeon Forge, Tenn.

New Exhibition Showcases

Ag Powerhouse

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On Thursday, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman helped open a new Smithsonian exhibition about the North American prairie — from its unique mix of flora and fauna to its huge agricultural output.

"Listening to the Prairie: Farming in Nature's Image," which opens to the public today, describes the evolution of the vast grasslands region as well as the progressive prairie farmers and ranchers who have found innovative new ways to farm the land and protect the environment.

Glickman, himself from the prairie state of Kansas said, "The prairies are the heart of America's breadbasket, producing much of the nation's corn, wheat, and soybeans. I hope this exhibit helps Americans better understand the vital contribution this region and its people make to the high quality of life we can all enjoy together."

As a member of Congress, Glickman was the lead initial author in the House of Representatives of legislation to create a prairie designation with the national park system.

The exhibit will run through March, 2001. It will travel to 20 libraries across the country.

Farm Bureau Program Encourages Farmers As Proud Water Partners

PARK RIDGE, Ill. — The American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) has introduced a new grassroots water quality initiative that highlights and encourages positive roles for farmers in protecting the nation's water resources.

The "Proud Water Partners" program includes insights gleaned from successful state Farm Bureau water quality efforts. Proud Water Partners encourages cooperative leadership from farmers regarding water quality issues, but also recognizes the supportive roles of other groups, government agencies and researchers who are interested in agriculture's success and water quality.

"This dynamic water quality program rightfully puts farmers in the driver's seat," said AFBF President Bob Stallman. "Proud Water Partners shows farmers, step-by-step, how they can work through their state Farm Bureau to reach out to their neighbors and others who believe that a strong agriculture is the best way to tackle any water quality challenge."

According to Stallman, the program empowers and equips farmers to:

- Take an even more active interest in the condition of their local water resources.

- Understand the true condition of local water resources and be familiar with the science behind such determinations.

- Address through changes in management practices any water quality challenge quantified by sound science.

- Work with government officials to correct any misidentification of water quality problems that are not supported by scientific fact.

The program includes an action notebook, which provides background on the program and the issue of water quality, step-by-step guidelines and suggestions for developing farmer-focused water quality programs at the state level, and examples of programs and ideas developed by state Farm Bureaus that have already proved successful.

"It is our hope that government officials will serve as helping hands as state Farm Bureaus put this program into place," Stallman said. "We expect these cooperative steps to be far more effective and rewarding than federal proposals, such as TMDL regulations, that tend to target farmers, create adversarial relationships and foster mistrust between government and the people it serves. True to the program's motto, America's farmers are 'Working the land. Protecting the water.' Through Proud Water Partners, farmers will further meld those two concepts into a singular action. Farmers are keenly aware of the vital roles that a healthy environment and quality natural resources play in the production of abundant, healthy, and safe food. And they know it all starts with water."

For more information about the Proud Water Partners program, contact Don Parrish, senior environmental policy specialist for AFBF, at (847) 685-8742 or your state Farm Bureau.

'Passing On The Farm' Workshop In Pottsville Dec. 13

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Transferring a family farm to the next generation seems as natural as the change in seasons. But tax traps, family squabbles, and lack of financing or business planning challenge many families attempting a transition — and outright threaten the continuation of some farms.

To help Pennsylvania farm families navigate these challenges, the Pennsylvania Farm Link and Penn State Cooperative Extension program will host a "Passing on the Farm" Workshop from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on Dec. 13 at the Schuylkill County Extension Office.

Pennsylvania Farm Link, based in Manheim, is a nonprofit organization dedicated to ensuring the continuation of family farms.

According to the 1997 Census, three times as many farm operators are over age 65 as under 35. Just from the perspective of retirement age, one-third to one-half of farmers will retire in the next decade. How we address this problem will affect agriculture in Pennsylvania for generations to come.

Marion Bowlan, executive director of Pennsylvania Farm Link, said, "In addition to providing for our food and fiber needs, farm families provide economic stability to our rural area, protect its prime farmland, and steward the land for succeeding generations. If we want to retain family farmers as part of our rural heritage we must do more to encourage new farm entry."

"How a farmer plans for his or her successor is one of the most important lifetime decisions that farmers will make. Because it requires frank and open discussions about retirement and death, many families either delay or avoid the planning process," she said. "While it is understandable, this strategy only narrows the choices and options available to both the retiring farmer and the beginning farmer and may result in unwanted tax consequences. Perhaps the most difficult decision to make is the decision to get started. Once you have made that decision there are many individuals and organizations such as Pennsylvania Farm Link that can help you in the planning process."

These workshops are a first step. Speakers will address bringing the next generation into the farm business, farm viability, farmland preservation programs, estate planning, legal aspects of transfers, retirement planning, and financing for new farmers. In addition, farmers from the region will discuss their families' efforts to transfer their businesses to the next generation.

Lunch will be on your own at the Pottsville meeting. Please call Pennsylvania Farm Link to register for this free meeting at (717) 664-7077 by Nov. 17. The extension office is located on Rt. 901 in Pottsville. For more information on these programs or for directions, contact Farm Link at (717) 664-7077 or e-mail pafarm-link@redrose.net.

American Angus Association Launches Record-Keeping Program For Commercial Cattle

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — The American Angus Association continues to make strides toward leading the beef industry in record-keeping systems and collecting performance data.

The Association's newest development is the Angus Beef Record Service (BRS), a system for keeping valuable records that are useful in decision making.

The Angus BRS is a complement to the Angus Herd Improvement Record (AHIR) program, and provides a mechanism for commercial producers to summarize their cattle performance records, which in turn can serve as a valuable tool to enhance profitability.

The Angus BRS will compile information on a producer's cowherd, including breed composition, sire information, breeding information, calving data and any additional performance or carcass data collected on a calf.

The Association will analyze the production data and report the information back to the individual producer. A genetic value will be developed for the cattle in terms of reproduction, growth, and end product merit, using the actual data submitted in addition to tying to the Angus database where possible.

"Keeping performance records is a necessity in today's beef industry," said Bill Bowman, director of commercial relations for the American Angus Association. "The data will help characterize the commercial cowherds using Angus genetics by providing information and analysis on individual cows, cow groups within a herd, and the entire herd."

Collecting data and tying the information back to an individual cow or to a group of a particular sire's daughters will make it possible for producers to make breeding and culling decisions based on fact rather than assumption. Other examples of the results of the Angus BRS include calving percentage, weaning percentage pounds of calf weaned per cow exposed at breeding, which helps the producer monitor productivity and potentially enhance profits in the cowherd.

In addition to collecting and processing data, the Angus BRS will provide producers a tool for source verification as well as national and electronic identification. These identification systems provide an information flow to improve quality management, facilitate domestic value-based marketing, and enhance access to export markets.

"In our opinion, future identification programs such as voluntary certification, genetic evaluation, replacement female development, and feeder calf quality assurance could be voluntary systems that are necessary for market access," Bowman said.

Another exciting aspect of the Angus BRS is the potential to identify Angus sires, previously "lost" that can make a significant contribution to the breed. For example, in fiscal year 1999, more than 40,000 Angus bulls were transferred to non-member buyers. These bulls may represent some of the top genetics of the breed, but because little progeny data is collected and processed on these bulls, they go undetected in the beef industry. The Angus BRS has the potential to build and enhance working relationships among breeders and bull buyers by tracking the success of the sires in commercial herds.

Bureau Recognizes Forest Steward

Robert Bonitz Jr.
HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Robert Bonitz Jr., Harrisburg, was recognized recently as a Forest Steward.

Paul Troutman, service forester for the Bureau of Forestry, Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, presented the award at the Bonitz property.

Being designated as a Forest Steward is an honor reserved for forest landowners who have made a commitment to managing their forest resources to ensure their health and productivity for years to come.

Donald P. Oaks, district forester for the Weiser Forest District of the Pennsylvania Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, Bureau of Forestry, said Bonitz started the process of becoming a Forest Steward by having a forest stewardship plan prepared by Jeff Eason, a forestry consultant from Dauphin. The Weiser Forest District covers Carbon, Dauphin, Lebanon, Lehigh, and Schuylkill counties.

Troutman said Bonitz has been managing his 196-acre forest for timber, wildlife, and recreation.

Poultry Genetic Selection Must Address Public Perception Issues

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — It'll take more than pushing a few buttons to achieve desired traits in poultry through genetic selection.

According to an Iowa State poultry expert, traits important to the poultry breeding industry are controlled by many different genes. Finding all of them — and discovering how they interact — will lay the groundwork for an improved bird, according to Susan J. Lamont.

Lamont, professor of animal science at Iowa State University in Ames, Iowa, spoke to about three dozen poultry producers and agri-industry representatives Monday afternoon. She spoke at the Penn State-sponsored Poultry Management and Health Seminar at Kreider's Restaurant.

Finding those traits requires studying "dozens of genes," said Lamont. To bring the genes necessary into commercial lines will require more research — and caution.

Selecting for those traits could be economically feasible, Lamont said, if they lower the cost of what you're replacing. But selecting for certain genes may require giving up other genes — a complex tradeoff.

Already, one company is making use of technology to determine the gender of eggs with 100 percent accuracy. Embrex, of Raleigh, N.C., utilized funding from the USDA small business innovative grant to sort eggs by gender.

The technology is "sound," Lamont noted, "and can be developed in the company."

Lamont quoted Catherine Ricks, vice president of Embrex research and development. "In laboratory trials," according to Ricks, "we have determined the gender in a series of eggs with 100 percent accuracy."

The company noted it plans to use the grant money to develop a "novel device used to sort avian eggs by gender," Lamont noted.

Lamont questioned that to look at what genetics can do for poultry lines and bird health, scenarios have to be examined. "What if transgenic poultry were widely accepted?" she said. "What if sexing embryos was a routine practice? And what if the use of antibiotics in poultry was banned?"

Those are issues the industry must face.

Transgenic poultry could someday be a routine method of using hens as "bioreactors," since eggs are a very efficient producer of proteins.

But the industry must find a way to prove how important to human medicine the use of recombinant technology can be.

Already, several companies are looking into the many ways genes can be manipulated to not only produce a better bird, but to fight poultry disease and even Poultry genetic research and public perception were highlights of a presentation by Susan J. Lamont, professor of animal science at Iowa State University, center. improve human health. Companies include Avigenics, CIMA, OviGen, Ovo Biosciences, TranXenoGen, Vivalis, and others.

Some are looking into producing birds with specific disease-resistant capabilities, Lamont noted.

However, the "holdups" in these developments include:

- Regulatory (genetically modified organism) issues, prominent in the public's perception. Many technology-based companies didn't talk about the benefits of genetically modified products before they were released. The products must be shown to be completely "risk-free," said Lamont, even though most products aren't.

- Technical development issues need to be overcome.

- Knowledge of genes and genetic mechanisms in poultry needs to be fully understood.

A benefit to sexing the embryos — to identify the gender of the egg at the embryonic level — could have an impact. Already, three-quarters of a billion male layer chicks are killed annually. The sexing could cut these numbers dramatically.

If sexing could be done, then could actual gender alteration be far behind? Lamont noted there were no "real success stories yet," but the technology to either kill off an unapproved gender or change all the embryos to the desired sex could be possible.

"These things might not be that far off," she said.

Control of food pathogens using genetics to enhance vaccine efficiency, or creating bird genetic resistance to disease, are at the forefront of research.

Studies at Iowa and other universities are looking into ways to identify Salmonella enteritidis (SE) and other disease resistance in birds. Lamont provided detail on how DNA markers, or "microsatellites," are used and the processes that scientists incorporate in genetic selection.

Some research to identify antibiotic response levels was undertaken using leghorns, Spanish birds, and Fayoumis in the laboratory.

Whatever the scientists come up with, the industry must be cautious to observe how sire traits can effect the outcome of genetic selection.

Importantly, the industry must move cautiously. They must bring the advances through "with information about why they're valuable," said Lamont.

Public perception is critical. And sometimes the public "won't accept it very graciously," Lamont said.

Perrydell Farms Honored For York Extension Involvement

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent
YORK (York Co.) — A third-generation dairy and milk retailing operation has been honored by the York County Extension Service for its participation in farm and community outreach programs.

Perrydell Farms, York, was honored during the annual York Extension dinner and meeting, conducted Nov. 3 at the 4-H Center.

Owned and operated by the families of Greg and Tom Perry, Perrydell Farm has long been in the business of serving the public. Their on-farm milk sales store, near Leaders' Heights in southern York County, is a regular stop for hundreds of area consumers on their weekly shopping trips. Along with purchasing their milk needs, customers enjoy the Perry's delicious ice cream, assorted other food products and especially the store's popular selection of bulk candies.

In the retail milk business since 1963, Perrydell Farm was founded in 1922 by Howard Perry, whose sons George and Roger vertically integrated the dairy cow and crops enterprises into the on-farm juggling operation. Cousins Tom, Greg, Chip, and Jeff continued to grow and expand the business, with Jeff selling his share of the family partnership to Tom and Greg last year to pursue an off-farm career.

Greg's wife, Laurie, and Tom's wife, Donna, are both actively involved in the farm and retailing businesses. Tom and Chip handle most of the juggling and consumer sales, while Greg oversees the cattle and crops enterprises.

Perrydell's farm is located just south of York city, an area of the county which saw some of the first urban sprawl as York metropolitan area crept outward. Judicious farming practices and sensitivity to "neighbor" issues have allowed the Perry family to successfully maintain their 140-head Holstein herd and 320-acres of crop production while surrounded with urban growth. Customers — many now second-generation buyers of Perrydell products — prize the opportunity to purchase direct almost at their back door.

With a long history of involvement with agriculture extension and community outreach programs, the Perrydell operation is a frequent host to educational tours and events and support numerous 4-H activities like Ag-Science Camp and day camps, various banquets and field days. The farm was one of the host sites for the 2000 Farm-City Tour conducted in October.

During the extension group's annual business meeting, four retiring board directors were cited for service. Retiring were Jerry Breeding, Scott Barr, Lourdis Dandignae and George Williams. A search is underway for a new county extension director for York, following current CED Roxanne Price's decision to step down from that administrative position to work more closely with programs.

A special presentation by "graduating" 4-H'er Heather Bankert featured a look at "the faces of 4-H." Heather has completed 11 years of participation in a wide range of 4-H programs and activities and is currently a freshman at Millersville University majoring in special education.

Featured speaker for the program was John Yocum, scientist-in-charge of the Southeast Agricultural Research and Extension Center of Penn State, Landisville, Lancaster County.

Yocum illustrated his informative summer discussion on the research center with slides showing some of the varied projects undertaken at the experimental crops farm. According to Yocum, research done at the Landisville center takes a different focus than that done on crops at the State College facility because of a milder climate in the southeast corner of the state. The regions mildness and accompanying humidity generally create more disease problems than in colder, shorter-season regions.

Originally established as a tobacco research facility, the center tests varieties, fertilization, weed and pest control especially appropriate to Pennsylvania's southeast corner, where 50 percent of the state's corn crop and 60 percent of the state's soybean production are grown.

The "applied research" or research which can be directly applied by producers to their agronomy problems and needs, spans dozens of crops and hundreds of tests of some of the main commodities produced in the southeastern region. One of only two soybean test sites in the state, the center did testing on nearly 100 varieties of the oil crop this year, about half of that devoted to herbicide-resistant strains.

Some 30 to 50 alfalfa varieties are under study for forage growers and between 500 to 1,000 weed control plots studied annually test materials aimed at a range of crops. Along with extensive field crop studies, the center researches florals and ornamentals. About 700 different flowers under test provided a wealth of color through the growing season this past summer, and 70 to 80 varieties of flowering crabapple trees are planted in a long-term study of the popular landscaping species.

Yocum, who mans the Southeast Research Center with two technicians and some part-time summer assistants, noted with humor that "if there's no equipment to do what we need, we'll build something." With test plots generally planted and harvested on a very small scale, normalized farm equipment is difficult to adapt for use. Thus the center utilizes such things as a specialized combine machine with a three-foot cutting head, quite an improvement from earlier years when every plot was hand-harvested.

Additional information on the programs and research projects carried out at the Southeast Research Center may be obtained by contacting the Cooperative Extension Service.

Safety Group Names Kreher To Executive Committee

GLENMONT, N.Y. — New York Farm Bureau Workers' Compensation Safety Group #486 announced that Brett Kreher, a long-time member of the group, was nominated to the Executive Committee as a temporary committee member.

Kreher will fill the position left vacant by the unfortunate passing of Ed Wright. Brett and his family run a poultry farm in Clarence.

"We are happy to have Brett on board," said Daniel Hooker, director of member services. "Kreher's Poultry Farm has been a member of the Safety Group since its inception in 1967. We are grateful for Brett's loyalty to the Safety Group and are sure that we will benefit from his experience."

The Safety Group's Executive Committee is responsible for overseeing all business activities of the group, determining dividend expenses and approving new classifications for the group.

The New York Farm Bureau Safety Group writes workers' compensation policies for nursery, sod, dairy, horse boarding and breeding operations, fruit, vegetable, berry, grape, poultry and greenhouse operations, in addition to feed manufacturing and retail grain and seed stores. Farm Bureau members needing workers' compensation insurance or those farmers not yet members of New York Farm Bureau can obtain more details by calling (800) 342-4143.

WINTER TEMPERATURE, RELATIVE HUMIDITY AND AMMONIA CONTROL IN BROILER HOUSES: A PENNSYLVANIA CASE STUDY

Winter Ventilation

Cold winter weather provides challenges for maintaining a comfortable indoor environment, whether it is in our own homes or the poultry house.

A healthy environmental condition with economical production of broilers is a primary ventilation goal, yet minimization of fuel use often drives management decisions.

Birds will substitute costly feed for fuel if conditions are too cool. Pennsylvania has relatively cold winters compared to other major poultry-producing regions that makes management of fuel use and ventilation strategies more challenging.

For this reason, the Pennsylvania Broiler Research Program funded a study where the primary objective was to document winter ventilation strategies and environmental conditions and relate these to bird productivity. Three Pennsylvania broiler houses were each monitored over three complete 35-day production cycles with the goal of stimulating more informed management decisions in relation to control of broiler house environment.

The Study

Broiler houses from one integrator company were studied to minimize variability among houses. Three houses were selected which were as similar to each other in size, age, type of construction, equipment (water and heating equipment, in particular), and litter conditions.

The houses contained space unit heaters mounted about 40 inches off the floor. Studying the same houses for all three cycles was done in an attempt to provide repetition of conditions and results. Growers and management were interviewed to determine ventilation goals, fuel use practices, and general growout policies. The winter of 1997/1998 was unusually warm compared to average and affected results.

Data collections were primarily electronic using small, portable sensors with data loggers. One set of outdoor temperature and relative humidity sensors provided a sense of the challenge faced by the environmental control system. Inside, three sets of temperature and relative humidity sensors were used to determine any variation in interior conditions due to uneven heat and fresh air distribution. An ammonia sensor was centrally located in the house. It was hung about one-foot off the floor in a wire cage suspended from the ceiling to discourage roosting, yet the birds could get under the sensor for normal manure deposition around the sensor site. Weekly data downloading and collection trips included hand-held instrument readings to supplement and verify the electronic data.

Indoor Environment Conditions

Environmental data from three different flocks from one farm are presented in Figures 1, 2, and 3 with one graph for each flock cycle. These temperature (T), relative humidity (RH), and ammonia (NH3) data were measured at about 1 foot off the litter.

Temperature of 90 degrees F is desirable at litter-level for chicks during the first three days after placement. Temperature is then dropped about one degree every day until 70 degrees F at market age is reached. During these three flock cycles, temperatures at chick-level were about 82 degrees F on day 1 but the temperature increased a few degrees over the following three days. The thermostat was located at about 5 feet off the floor. Its setpoint temperature was obviously not matching temperature conditions at the lower bird level. More information about temperature stratification findings will follow in a subsequent article.

Relative humidity indoors was within the acceptable 40 to 60% range during the early parts of all three cycles. Later in the cycles, when ventilation rates were increased to accommodate the larger bird weights, the RH was more likely to follow outdoor RH trends, which is acceptable. Especially during the first three weeks, when timer fans and minimum ventilation for ammonia and humidity control were employed, the RH was within acceptable limits for all three flocks (except during some very humid days during the second week of Flock 3).

Ammonia level was generally within the desirable 0 to 25 ppm range during the first two weeks of Flock 2 on new litter, but was well above acceptable levels during week-one for the other flock cycles on reused litter. Day 1 average ammonia level was 84 ppm for Flock 1 and 122 ppm for Flock 3. These high levels decreased dramatically during the following week. Flock 1 ammonia level settled into a fairly steady 28 to 38 ppm level over the balance of the flock cycle while the Flock 3 level fluctuated from 26 to 56 ppm. The major difference contributing to the low Flock 2 ammonia level was the use of new litter. The first and third flocks were both on once-used litter that volatilized large quantities of ammonia.

Flock Performance

The productivity results among the three flocks were diverse. Flock 1 performed the worst of the nine flocks under study in bird productivity, mortality, and financial return to the grower.

The second flock was second best of the nine flocks in return in cents/lb bird grown and the best in terms of a growth index our research group derived to measure flock productivity. The third flock was in the mid-to-low-range of these measurements.

More About

Ammonia And Humidity

One old "rule of thumb" that by controlling humidity, the ammonia level would likewise be at an acceptable level was not confirmed by these data. Especially during week one when chicks would be most susceptible to ammonia challenge, the ammonia fluctuations and humidity pattern were not related. Acceptable humidity during week one was only matched with acceptable ammonia in Flock 2 on new litter. With old litter, it would appear that relative humidity and ammonia level are not positively correlated. This has been found in other studies.

There has been discussion among our research group that exposure to elevated levels of ammonia during the first few days after chick placement has a greater impact than after the brood period. Other recent research has demonstrated the more detrimental effect of high (100 ppm) ammonia level exposure for 19 days versus continuous exposure to moderate (50 ppm) ammonia over 33 days. That experiment was on older birds from 28 to 65 days of age. Our experiment suggests that even short term exposure to high ammonia levels during the first one, two, or three days of life can inhibit bird productivity. Further analysis is underway to better quantify this effect into an industry-usable guideline.

Conclusions

Ammonia levels were much higher than expected in the houses during early stages of the growout. We were all a bit surprised at this. The integrator personnel were disappointed, as one might expect, especially since these managers have a very good understanding of ventilation concepts. The growers were not aware of the magnitude of the ammonia level. One might think that these results were unusual or that we chose the worst case to present here. In fact, this was an above-average grower who has a "typical" understanding of ventilation and environmental control. Similar results were found at the other two study farms.

Upcoming articles will address more aspects of the cool temperatures found at chick level and more specifics of the ammonia control issue.

Application Of Results

Place more emphasis on having a service person present when chicks are placed in a house to assure that environmental conditions, such as ammonia level and floor temperature, and other established husbandry practices are in place for the chicks. We suggest a service person do this, as the integrator company is more likely to own the instrumentation necessary to perform these functions.

Purchase instrumentation capable of detecting ammonia. Sampler pumps with ammonia tubes are common. Passive sampler tubes are also an effective tool. The growers, in particular, recognized their diminished ability to detect ammonia stemming from repeated exposure during chores. A sampler tube will offer a way of providing quantification of ammonia conditions that are difficult to detect. Instrumentation information is available from the authors.

Consider litter additives, fresh litter during winter flocks, or increased winter ventilation for ammonia control. A follow-up study will be evaluating the effectiveness and costs of these alternatives.

Backman stated that Penn State was a neutral party in the biotechnology discussion as the university is a neutral forum for testing genetically-engineered organisms.

"That's why we're in this game. It's important not only as a tool to answering problems, but we're aware of citizens' concerns and the environment," said Backman.

Medley emphasized that he was giving his perspective as bioengineering as a tool.

There are a number of different issues facing agriculture, said Medley. Feeding the world, the aging population, dealing with environmental stewardship issues, and the economic viability of agriculture are challenges today which biotechnology could help answer.

"Biotechnology tends to be safer and lower in cost than traditional solutions," said Medley.

Freese raised several questions about the safety and economic viability of genetic engineering. Freese is concerned about genetically-engineered foods. "Is it really a precise process?" asked Freese, citing use of a gene gun to insert DNA into cells.

"Do genetic engineers understand what's going on between DNA and the cells, or the plant's defense mechanisms to foreign DNA, or where the genes end up in the core chromosome and how many copies are made?" he asked.

A gene in the cell disrupts existing genes, possibly creating allergens and toxins. Freese pointed out the use of the "Starlink" strain of corn which was not approved for food use but ended up in foods intended for human consumption.

Freese also questioned whether there has been thorough testing on genetic organisms by the FDA and EPA, and wondered whether genetically altered strains of crops are actually economically viable, saying that herbicide-resistant crops may have a yield drag.

Genetically-altered crops may also facilitate insects' developed resistance to biotech crops, said Freese. He also pointed out that the problem may not be so much in production of food to feed the world, but in distribution.

Medley outlined his view of the two greatest benefits to bioengineering. "It's a tool used to solve myriads of issues, an application of science," said Medley. He stood by the stringent testing and safety standards passed by genetically-altered foods.

"If you look at the products on the market, they have been tested; the tomatoes had five years of testing before they were commercialized."

One problem facing America is the continued growth of the aging population, he said, a problem which could be addressed with the connection between diet and health. Bioengineering is now a tool to enhance nutrients available in soy to prevent diseases.

Bioengineering also addresses agriculture production problems. "One-half of the world's population is in two countries, India and China," said Medley. Genetically-altered crops would improve developing countries' production. Since these countries do not have the technology of more developed countries, genetically-altered crops would make the playing field more "scale neutral."

At left, Extension Director Trudy Dougherty and Tim Fritz, farm management extension agent, right, honor Laurie Szoke for 15 years of service as a 4-H coordinator for Chester County.

"It can allow increase yield in small plots of and without equipment and technology without changing production practices."

Again, said Medley, bioengineering is "not a panacea to be used by itself, but a tool."

Freese followed Medley's statements by stating, "Biotechnology follows a pattern towards ever-new technological fixes." Freese cited examples of the demise of family farming in last 50 years. Genetic engineering, said Freese, is the wrong way to improve agriculture, and questioned its role in sustainable agriculture.

Freese also pointed out implications of using genetically-altered crops in the third world, such as the "Terminator" variety of seed, where the crop grows normally but the subsequent seeds are sterile, which keeps producers coming back to the seed supply company year after year.

Backman noted that there are tradeoffs for genetic engineering. The bottom line at the college of agricultural sciences is balancing the best interests of agriculture sustainability, environment, and community.

The Terminator strain of seeds, said Backman, was developed as a beneficial tool to prevent outcropping and guard against genes spreading between crops.

Foods Debate

The knowledge of how to control genetic expression would have inestimable use in the health care field, in having the ability to turn off and on the expression of, for example, cancer cells. Backman said that bioengineering is a matter of "using technology right, for the right purposes."

Everything out there has a risk," said Backman. "We're trying to lower the risks and increase the benefits, to keep profitability and maintain the rural community."

Organic farming proved to be a hot button for the audience in attendance. Freese noted that organic farming is more labor-intensive, which would mean the addition of people "back on the land," a boon for sustainable agriculture.

"It's a mistake to impose any one solution on anyone," said Medley. "There is a place for organic agriculture but also current production agriculture meets a lot of needs."

The United States produces the safest, most abundant food at a reasonable cost. We must allow for diversity in production practices," Backman noted that corn with a Bt gene helps to lower the amount of sprays needed.

Freese wondered whether the public could trust the companies that said the sprays were safe before are now touting genetically-engineered crops to reduce spraying, as he noted that chemical and seed companies were one and the same.

"Why is biotechnology developing?" asked Freese. "Is it because of pressure from corporations for profit for stockholders, or seeking what is good?"

"If you want to talk about sustainability, biology must be part of the platform," said Medley.

Clair King, Cochranville producer, attended the meeting and shared his thoughts at the end of the public discussion. To answer Freese, King reported that he no longer has a yield drag in soybeans, which Freese had suggested was characteristic of genetically-altered crops.

"I really appreciate the technology that has kept our farm in farming for three generations," said King, who farms along with his father, son, and two brothers.

The Kings farm 800 acres of potatoes, corn, soybeans, wheat, and barley. King's brothers also run a 60-cow dairy.

"There were years that I sprayed three times on a lot of acreage. Now I spray the entire corn acreage once and spot spray the second time. We basically wait until the weeds are there and spray when we have to. That really has helped us, saving $20-25 compared to what we once used," he said.

He encouraged organic farmers to "go for it," but added that

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

FUTURES MARKETS

What is really needed to shore up cheese prices is for "natural cheese" to enter the CCC. That is what represents "block cheese." Perhaps the most interesting part of USDA's weekly Dairy Market News report was the following quote: "A few processors were filling in extra line time with process production for offering to CCC. Natural and process continues to be packaged and graded for sale to the CCC."

It is possible that cheese prices strengthened this week as a result of strong fresh cheese movement and imminent sale of natural cheese to the CCC.

In other dairy market news, if you thought the presidential elections were weird, try to figure out what happened in the butter market this week. Grade AA butter prices in Chicago rose $0.5125 per pound on November 8, 2000. This can be explained by the laws of supply and demand. Milk production is up over 3 percent so far this year, cumulative butter production through September is up 45 percent, butter consumption through August is up just 0.4 percent, and butter stocks by the end of September are up 18.7 percent relative to a year ago.

More butter, less consumption, higher stocks—okay, maybe the rise in butter prices had nothing to do with supply and demand! USDA reported that cream supplies are very tight right now and may have contributed to the price rise. But, what is clear is that higher butter prices this time of the month will contribute to a higher Class I mover in December. It will also raise cream prices to processors. Look for butter inventory to move out of the freezer and into the marketplace.

Speakers at this week's dairy cattle nutrition workshop were, from left, Bill Weiss, professor of dairy science, Ohio State; Gabriella Varga, professor of animal nutrition, Penn State; and Jud Heinrichs, professor of dairy and animal science, Penn State.

also vary significantly, the nutrition expert said, in chemical composition.

"Even corn grain has significant variations," he said.

The new book, out in January, will further define nutrient values depending on feed used.

The book has "big changes in energy values," noted Weiss.

"Use this to balance diets."

Some recommendations in the 1989 edition included feed values that were calculated too high.

By-product composition values, including for cottonseed, have changed. Cottonseed hulls are a lot higher in fiber yet have poor digestibility.

And nutritionists should be aware that total digestible nutrient (TDN) values are an "extremely poor measurement of energy content of feeds high in protein and high in fat," Weiss noted.

Two feeds with the same TDN can have very different net energy for lactation (NEL) values, Weiss said.

TDN is not equal to NEL. In the 2000 book, TDN values are "completely disconnected from NELs," said Weiss.

In the new book, higher protein feeds have more energy. If the nutritionist would feed higher protein, the dairy animal would have "higher net energies," he said.

Overall, Weiss noted, it will require more energy to produce milk in 2000 than 1989.

Different dietary requirements will consider new feed energy values and "bioavailability" of certain nutrients. The bioavailability requirement considers how much the heifer or cow has to "absorb," Weiss said, not simply how much she is fed.

On supplementary vitamins, vitamin A values increase 50 percent over the old 1989 values. Vitamin D values don't change. Vitamin E values reveal a big increase, simply as a way to prevent mastitis.

Body weight after calving is the most significant correlation to how much milk a cow will produce, particularly the end portion of the growth period, according to Jud Heinrichs, Penn State professor of dairy and animal science.

Heinrichs also reviewed some NRC guide book changes, important in combination with general management.

Heinrichs noted some keys to lifetime profitability based on the dollar amount of input at heifer raising compared to the milking cow.

It could be possible to decrease the amount of time to calving while increasing rate of gain.

If calved at 22 months, the rate of gain stands at 1.7-1.8 pounds per day maximum, Heinrichs noted. Through management and diet, in addition to genetic selection, nutritionists could get more rapid rates of gain and calve younger than 22-24 months.

For now, Heinrichs noted that dairy nutrition research is looking at ways to increase the growth and development of the rumen. The vast majority of the growth in the animal comes from a developed rumen.

By maintaining the energy levels calves get in the correct way, increasing protein relative to energy, and providing enough rumen-available carbohydrates early enough could be the keys to lifetime milk production.

Also, when regarding the changes to the NRC book, it's critical to look at complete management issues, including the environment and housing — not just the foodstuffs.

For heifers particularly, Heinrichs noted, the feed component "has a high impact on growth, health, and lifetime milk production."

Terry Etherton, department head of Penn State Dairy and Animal Science, said that in 2-3 years, Pennsylvania could rank as Number 3 in the country in milk production and cows.

In the year 2007 versus 1997, states that will increase production will be located in the west and southwest regions of the country.

Yet science still has some mysteries to uncover, particularly through research, to explain production. One cow in North Carolina generates 72,000 pounds of milk in a year. What makes that cow different from a commonplace 20,000-pound producer?

"They use the same metabolic pathways," said Etherton. But clearly, the North Carolina cow uses nutrients more efficiently — a frontier that scientists "still don't understand very well," he said.

But management of feeds can prove costly. Already Penn State researchers have shown that bad forage quality can cost producers $100,000 a year in a 100-cow herd, said Etherton.

Nutritionists and herd managers must work together to cope with changes and challenges within the industry.

"If you don't change, you're static," Etherton said. "And if you're static, you're going to be sunk."

At the conference Tuesday afternoon, attendees took part in a hands-on forage analysis workshop.

Tim Beck, regional dairy program coordinator, and Virginia Ishler, extension assistant from State College, conducted the workshop.

Lisa Holden, Penn State associate professor, and Richard Stup, senior extension associate, provided a workshop on "interface areas" regarding managing dairy personnel and providing tools for a happy and productive work environment.

ASA'S 33rd Annual Meeting Convention Set For Denver

BOZEMAN, Mont. — The American Simmental Association (ASA) will conduct its 33rd Annual Meeting and Convention in Denver, Colorado, January 13-17, 2001. It will be held in conjunction the Simmental cattle activities at the prestigious National Western Stock Show and Rodeo.

"We invite all interested members and friends of ASA to participate," said ASA Executive Vice President Jerry Lipsey.

"The most unique aspect of this convention is that all meetings are scheduled for the evening. Our members will have their days free for show activities and other cattle events, while still being able to attend and participate in association meetings." The DoubleTree Hotel at 3203 Quebec Street, near the old Stapleton Airport, will once again serve as Simmental Convention headquarters. Rooms may be reserved by telephoning

Growth Continues In Fiscal 2000 For American Angus Association

The American Angus Association's 2000 fiscal year, which ended September 30, showed growth in nearly every area of business for the Association and its entities, which include Angus Productions Inc. and Certified Angus Beef (CAB), LLC. Registrations of Angus cattle increased by nearly four percent from the previous year and CAB estimates more than half a billion pounds of product sold.

"This 14th consecutive year of growth in business for the association is another indicator of the increasing presence of Angus genetics in this industry," says Richard L. Spader, executive vice president of the Association in St. Joseph, Mo. "Cattlemen and consumers are both looking for the high quality product they get with Angus genetics and Certified Angus Beef™ products, and our breeders are ready to deliver."

Registrations of Angus cattle reached 271,222, an increase of 3.95 percent and a 25-year high for the Association. Transfers for the year, which represent sales of cattle to new owners, were up at 169,232, an 11.79 percent increase.

The increase in business at the association was reconfirmed with higher average selling prices of Angus cattle across the nation. Reported figures include a total of 593 Angus sales, including consignment, production and dispersal, that were attended by regional managers representing the Association. Respective averages include cows, $2,480 per head; bulls, $2,292 per head; and registered Angus steers, $995 per head, with a total average for all lots of $2,367.

Sales of Certified Angus Beef™ product passed the half billion pounds mark, maintaining the CAB position as the largest breed-specific branded beef program in the world. Projected annual sales of 565 million pounds, an increase of almost 14.6 percent, were reported. Retail licensees sold 306 million pounds, which represents 54 percent of total sales for the program, while food service licensees sold 165 million pounds.

International licensees contributed 84 million pounds to total sales. As consumer demand for fast and easy meal solutions continues to rise, the value added products division also saw growth in fiscal 2000.

In all, 10.5 million head of cattle were visually identified for the program, a 10.5 percent increase from 1999. Of those cattle, more than 1.92 million met Certified Angus Beef™ product specifications for an 18.4 percent acceptance rate.

Association members reported an all-time high number of weight records to the association's breed improvement departments, submitting 684,895 in all, which was a 6.7 percent increase from the previous year. The total breaks down to 272,885 birth, 272,462 weaning and 139,548 yearling weights.

Members are taking advantage of technology by submitting an increasing number of registrations to the association electronically. In fiscal 2000 more than 50,000 registrations were submitted electronically by members, which is nearly 20 percent of the total received. More than 28 percent of weaning weights and 34 percent of yearling weights were also submitted electronically.

The roster of members in the association continued to climb with business. New regular memberships issued totaled 3,012, an increase of 11.1 percent from last year, while new junior memberships were steady at 1,693, down less than one percent from fiscal 1999.

Breeders continue to use artificial insemination and embryo transfer in their registered Angus herds. Members registered 20,383 embryo transplant calves, a 10.4 percent increase from fiscal 1999, and the number of artificial insemination service certificates issued totaled 109,667, up 6.9 percent.

Angus Productions Inc. continued to see growth in all areas of business. Advertising and sale books inserted in the Angus Journal climbed to record-setting levels and the Web marketing department continues to offer marketing options to breeders via the Internet.

The American Angus Association is the world's largest beef breed organization. The not-for-profit company and its Certified Angus Beef division, along with its for-profit subsidiary, Angus Productions, Inc., and its affiliate, the Angus Foundation, provide programs and services for its members, support youth, education and research, and promote the Angus breed. American Angus Association headquarters are located in St. Joseph, Mo.

Penn State Dairy Advisory Team Program Releases Resource CD

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A CD-ROM of all materials needed to develop and implement Dairy Advisory Teams is now available. These electronic materials make it possible for any organization to conduct informational meetings, train advisory teams, market the concept, and conduct a service business providing dairy advisory teams. The cost of the CD is $25. Please make checks payable to The Pennsylvania State University. The same materials are also available free of charge on the Dairy Advisory Team website: <http://dat.das.psu.edu>.

Dairy Advisory Teams improve farm success using current key advisers. Advisory teams consider individual farm values, objectives, and constraints before identifying critical opportunities to improve business success. Teams are selected from three to five people with skills and abilities that complement the farm management goals.

A non-farm adviser facilitates the mechanics of organizing and running the team meeting in consultation with the owner. Health, financial, and nutritional advisers can play important roles. Team meetings are short, focused, and regular. Teams focus on select action plans that are critical to success.

To order a Dairy Advisory Team Resource CD-ROM or for more information about the program, please contact Shelly Hershey at (814) 865-4685, e-mail: shershey@das.psu.edu.

2000 CONFERENCE

Northeast Order Uniform Price For October 2000

BOSTON, Mass. — Erik F. Rasmussen, Market Administrator for the Northeast Marketing Area, has announced that the statistical uniform price for October 2000 is $13.32 per hundredweight or $1.15 per gallon for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, MA (Boston).

The October statistical uniform price is $13.22 for delivery to plants in New York, NY, and $13.12 for delivery to plants in Philadelphia, PA. The statistical uniform price is the benchmark minimum producer blend price paid to dairy farmers, prior to allowable deductions, for milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids. The price received by an individual dairy farmer will vary as the component composition of a farm's milk differs from the established benchmarks.

Mr. Rasmussen also stated that the producer price differential (PPD) for October is $3.30 per hundredweight for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, MA. The PPD represents each producer's share of the value generated by the marketwide pool on a hundredweight basis.

The PPD, which is added to the payment producers receive for their milk's components, is adjusted for the location of the receiving plant. The statistical uniform price and PPD decrease by scheduled amounts the more distant the plant receiving producer milk is from Suffolk County, MA.

The Class prices for milk pooled in October are as follows: Class I, $15.14 (Suffolk County, MA); Class II, $12.54; Class III, $10.02; and Class IV, $11.81. Had the Northeast Order been in effect in 1999, comparable class prices for October 1999 would have been: Class I $19.79, Class II $12.50, Class III $12.48, and Class IV price $11.83.

The component values for October are protein, $1.8028 per pound; butterfat, $1.2444 per pound; other solids, $0.0471 per pound; and nonfat solids, $0.8585 per pound.

Milk receipts from producers totaled 1.895 billion pounds. Class I utilization, milk processed as beverage milk, was 48.5 percent of producer milk receipts. The average Class I utilization, for the three predecessor orders that were combined to form the Northeast Order, was 44.8 percent in October 1999.

The manufacture of Class II products such as cream, ice cream, yogurt, and cottage cheese utilized 19.7 percent of producer milk. Milk used to manufacture Class III products such as cheese (American and Italian) and evaporated and condensed products utilized 27.3 percent of total milk receipts. Class IV usage (butter, nonfat and whole milk powder) equaled 4.5 percent of the total.

Leaders Attend Land O' Lakes Dairy Regional Fall Meeting

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.)

— Two of the top dairy leaders in the country were in Carlisle for the Land O'Lakes fall regional meeting on Tuesday.

More than 200 producers attended the meeting that included a director's report, management report, and operations report besides separate region governance meetings. Land O' Lakes is an organization owned by cooperatives and dairy producers throughout the nation, including nearly 3,000 members in the Mid-Atlantic region.

During the meeting, Land O'Lakes President and Chief Executive Officer Jack Gherty gave a management report and reported on a progressive and financially strong year. Also presenting during the meeting were Jack Prince, executive vice president and chief operating officer of the dairy foods division; Gordon Hoover, secretary of the Land O'Lakes corporate board and Lancaster County dairy producer; and Bill Schrieber, vice president of Eastern operations.

Hoover gave the board of directors report. "As legislative issues become more and more important, it becomes more important to take extremely active roles in the legislative process," he said.

He cited Land O'Lake's Political Action Program (PAC) as an example of the organization's involvement in legislation. Legislative success included, with passage of the appropriations bill, an extension of the Dairy Price Support program, $600 million in market loss payments to dairy farmers, $7.1 billion in assistance to wheat, feed, grain and seed producers, plus the establishment of permanent normal trade relations (PNTR) with China.

Upcoming issues, said Hoover, included 2002 Farm Bill discussions to have policy in place and develop unity among agricultural programs.

The September board meeting is primarily for long-range planning, said Hoover. "We are extremely committed in this environment of change and volatility to compete and win. We have a committed board and cooperative on behalf of our members," he said.

In Gherty's management report, he outlined several reasons the dairy industry is facing difficult times.

A slumping, volatile market, intense competition, ongoing integration consolidation, and accelerating change are obstacles facing the industry, said Gherty.

Even in this environment, said Gherty, Land O' Lakes continues to pursue its mission of optimizing members' dairy, crop, and livestock production. For the first three quarters of 2000, sales were up three percent from a year ago to $4.4 billion, according to Gherty. The organization made major acquisitions of agronomy facilities, saw $68.7 million in earning in the dairy foods division, invested capital, saw equities go up and long-term debt go down.

The organization also formed AgriAlliance, which brings together five organizations to create a cooperative. Land O' Lakes also established a Farmland Feed organization, putting together two competing Midwestern co-ops to reduce cost of production for each. This year Land O' Lakes expanded the layer business, which in turn should help increase the feed business, said Gherty. The organization's seed business is now the fourth largest seed company in the nation.

Also this year the organization's infrastructure was upgraded, as the Carlisle facility's capacity was doubled. Land O' Lakes purchased Madison Dairy, a major private label butter producer, in the past year. In addition, progress has been made on the joint venture of a cheese and whey plant in the West.

To expand into the e-commerce outlet, Dairy.com is also in the works for the organization as a tool for both producers and processors.

New technology and biotechnology will bring food safety to the forefront of dairy issues, according to Gherty.

"Integration of the food supply chain is blurring the line between production agriculture and processing. Chains are being built," said Gherty.

Land O' Lakes must grow to compete effectively, said Gherty.

Resources are finite, and growth must be consistent with proactive management of the portfolio, or, more simply, the organization must continue to become more focused. One example of becoming focused is selling businesses, even good businesses, to invest in others. Another critical aspect to the growth and effectiveness of the organization is generating industry-competitive financial results. "Land O' Lakes must perform as a business," said Gherty.

Also, exceptional people are essential to build the right culture, environment, and teamwork for the organization. Land O' Lakes is more than a farm-supply or dairy coop, said Gherty, and that strength can be leveraged to create competitive advantage.

Also in Gherty's report, he paid a special tribute to Bob Dever, vice president of public affairs, who, after 31 years with Land O' Lakes, is moving from full time to a consulting position for the company. The operations report was given by executive vice president and chief operating officer for the Dairy Foods Group Jack Prince.

"Volumes are up, and we are have a record year in butter sales," Prince said. "Although soft pricing has affected our dollars sales, Dairy Foods earnings through September are $18.1 million on the value-added side and $4.7 million on the industrial side. That's in addition to the one-time net gain of $45.9 million on repositioning our Dairy Foods assets, including the sale of the Fluid Dairy Division and the revaluing of assets related to the Alpine Lace cheese business."

Key accomplishments in 2000, said Prince, include a two-fold in butter volume production and earnings up $8.6 million. The Madison Dairy acquisition increased the volume for the company by 20 percent.

Also in 2000, Land O' Lakes launched the "Ultra Creamy" product line. The foodservice sector had a record year, with volume up seven percent, plus the additions of new products including sauces. "The value-added side of the business positions the business to compete long-term," said Prince.

The deli sector had earnings of $2.9 million. Alpine Lace, which falls under the deli category, is being repositioned, according to Prince. Known as a low-fat product, Alpine Lace unfortunately was not known for its great taste. Land O' Lakes, therefore, hopes to reformat the recipe to make the recipe low fat but not nonfat, so the company can tout the line as a "healthy product that tastes good, not just a low-fat product," said Prince. The fluid dairy sector was sold to Dean Foods, which allows Land O' Lakes to become more focused, said Prince.

Challenges facing the organization are dealing with change and competing with bigger competitors, said Prince. Land O' Lakes must become national-marketing oriented, invest in people and new technology, drive their business through consumer insight, and continue with product innovation, consolidate in key areas, and streamline the supply chain.

On the industrial side, Prince said the organization will focus on being world-class. Land O' Lakes is already spread nationally and has top facilities, important steps toward becoming a world-class operation, according to Prince.

Key accomplishments include financial turnarounds and an expansion of Producer Risk Management Program. Especially important, said Prince, is the restructuring taking place in the upper Midwest, where Land O' Lakes is evaluating partnerships, ventures, and alliances. In three years, predicts Prince, the structure in the upper Midwestern area will look completely different compared to the structure today. "We don't discount any opportunity to restructure the Midwest," said Prince.

Challenges facing Land O' Lakes include the slow pace of change in the company's system, increased energy and insurance costs, and product losses, such as the large volume of product lost with an antibiotic contamination in a plant.

Capital investment, integral to the operation, is still a necessary part of the operation but also a challenge. "If we want to be the first choice for producers, we have to make those investments," he said.

Besides investments, Land O' Lakes must also look at consolidation. "Either you're a consolidator or you're going to have to be one of those that leaves the business."

In the question-and-answer session, Prince covered the organization's strategies for the future, which include continued restructuring in the Upper Midwest.

"We're not here to see what fancy buildings we can make, or what we can do against the competition. We're here to maximize the value of the dairy member's products," said Gherty.

Dever addressed the issue of the future of the dairy industry on the East Coast. According to Dever, the sheer volume of people residing in the East make a ready market. Coupled with the population growth in the South, Eastern dairy producers should have a promising future. Pennsylvania, said Dever, is ideally located to reach the supply-deficit markets.

Prince noted that two-thirds of the dairy market is located east of the Mississippi. "You have the knowledge and technology. It's a matter of deciding for yourself if you can compete with other dairymen, to ask yourself if you are as good as other dairymen."

To answer questions addressing cheese, Prince said that eight billion pounds of cheese are made annually, with a need to build new facilities because of increase cheese demand.

The supply of mozzarella cheese, said Prince, is not keeping up with the current demand, as evidenced in the addition of other cheeses in the shredded cheese bags available at grocery stores. Mozzarella cheese, he noted, provides the best return for dairy producers, an incentive to make sure that demand is filled.

State Dairy Princess Melinda Wolfe, 19, gave a "behind-the-scenes" speech about dairying as she outlined the hard work and dedication to the industry that she has seen in her father.

Wolfe is an elementary education major at Bloomsburg University.

The meeting also included separate region governance meetings to elect corporate boards and address policies and resolutions.

During the afternoon session Bill Schrieber, vice president of Eastern operations, spoke about the Carlisle butter plant and Mid-Atlantic operations.

Lancaster County non-profit organizations and farmland preservation pioneer.

• Donald K. Roseman, owner and CEO of Acorn Press and Hourglass Foundation Trustee.

• William E. Seachrist, entrepreneur and former chair of the board of trustees of Franklin and Marshall College.

• F. Barry Shaw, president and CEO, Wenger's Feed Mill, Inc., Rheems and trustee, Gettysburg College.

• Marilyn Ware, chairman, American Waterworks Company, Inc. and farmland preservation pioneer.

The goal for this year's Harvest Appeal is $250,000, and the Trust has already raised $75,000 toward that goal. Contributions come from individuals, families, foundations, and businesses. The Harvest Appeal is essential to the Trust's ability to preserve Lancaster County farms, since the non-profit organization neither seeks nor accepts funding from any government agency — a fact that helps ensure that the Trust's program can be used by the County's Amish and plain Mennonite farmers.

Lancaster Farmland Trust is a private, non-profit organization working to preserve the rich and productive farmland of Lancaster County, to support good stewardship of the land, and to encourage a thriving agricultural economy, recognizing that our farm heritage enriches the lives of all citizens.

President Thomas D. Stouffer is enthusiastic about this year's campaign and the accomplishments of the Trust. He noted: "Farmland preservation has moved into the mainstream of both agriculture and good local and county planning. We have preserved 14 farms and over 1100-acres in the last 12 months — bringing the Trust's total to 117, double the number preserved just five short years ago. When added to the work of the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board, this means over 36,000-acres of farmland preserved in Lancaster County since 1980. That represents 20 percent of the farmland preserved in Pennsylvania. Additionally, there are more farms preserved in Lancaster County than in any other county in the U.S. Consequently, the County's public/private cooperation remains a model for farmland preservation efforts across the nation.

"And we've been doing more than preserving farms. We follow and respond to important issues that affect our best farmland and therefore the lives of all the citizens of the County. Ours has been a pro-agriculture, common sense approach. We have ardently supported good planning. We understand the need for growth, but we have opposed unplanned sprawl in favor of "smart" growth. We have supported changes to the Pennsylvania Municipalities Planning Code that enable townships to better plan for growth as they protect prime agricultural land. And we continue to propose measures that would give additional tax relief to owners of preserved farms.

"We have undertaken numerous projects and events to raise awareness and funds in support of our vision for the future of the County. Most noteworthy is Lancaster County Farm Life: Farming Families and Their Commitment to the Land, an insightful and evocative book by volunteers Sara Barton and Gini Woy that splendidly depicts the lives and work of seven families who have permanently preserved their farms."

He added: "If you are concerned about sprawl and over development, the most powerful thing you can do is contribute to farmland preservation. And it's not too late if we act now!"

Major Dairy Initiative Announced By USDA

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)—Responding to persistent and historically low milk prices, Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman recently told America's dairy farmers that significant new assistance is on the way.

Glickman said the agriculture appropriations bill that President Clinton is expected to sign provides an estimated $667 million to help dairy farmers cope with the low milk prices. Prices have declined for three consecutive years and are now at their lowest level since 1991.

Approximately 80,000 dairy operations across the country will receive an average of $8,300 each. The maximum payment per operation will be capped at $25,000. Overall, USDA expects to distribute more than twice as much dairy market loss assistance this year as it has in the last two years combined.

"Many of America's small- and medium-size dairy farms need this help to survive," said Glickman.

Estimates indicate that Pennsylvania dairy farmers will receive about $48.5 million. New York farmers will receive an estimated $60 million. Minnesota is expected to receive about $56 million. USDA will distribute an estimated $51 million in California and $137 million in Wisconsin.

State Director William Baumgartner added his agreement that the state's small-to-medium-sized dairy operations will benefit from the payment and is very pleased that the quantity eligible for payment was increased from 26,000 cwt. to 39,000 cwt. According to Baumgartner, this will work well for Pennsylvania's typically smaller operations.

In addition, Glickman announced a major expansion of USDA's Dairy Options Pilot Program. This innovative cost-share program helps dairy farmers put a "floor" under the price they receive for milk using the futures and options markets. USDA subsidizes both premiums and brokerage fees for participating dairy farmers. USDA will spend about $24 million over the next two years expanding this program, but the innovative approach used will allow dairy farmers to leverage significantly more protection against price drops. The program, currently operating in 61 counties, will expand to 300 counties in 39 states.

The participating counties in Pennsylvania include Bedford, Berks, Blair, Bradford, Butler, Centre, Chester, Crawford, Cumberland, Erie, Fayette, Franklin, Huntingdon, Juniata, Lancaster, Lawrence, Lebanon, Mercer, Perry, Somerset, Susquehanna, Tioga, Union, Westmoreland, and York.

The market loss assistance payments will be made to dairy farmers who received payments in the last two years as well as new producers. In an effort to speed payments and eliminate the need for a sign-up, payments to previous participants will be automatically calculated based on 1997 or 1998 production levels, whichever are higher.

To better target small-to-medium-sized producers, payment calculations for all participants will be limited to the first 39,000 cwt. of production. All dairy farmers will receive the same payment rate. Further details are expected to be announced next month. Payments are expected to go out within the next few months.

Alfred State Receives Grant

ALFRED, N.Y.—The Department of Agriculture and Horticulture at Alfred State College has been awarded a grant of $48,000 through the American Distance Education Consortium (ADEC).

Principal investigators will be Joan Wissert, assistant professor and chair, Agriculture and Horticulture, Alfred State College; Kenneth Mudge, Cornell University; and William Head, SUNY Morrisville.

Alabama A&M University will also participate. Other Alfred State College Ag and Hort Department participants are James Comes, lecturer, and Rachel LaMorte, assistant professor.

The objective of this project is to extend offerings in the horticultural sciences to undergraduate students through a series of distance learning modules.

Methods include asynchronous Web/CD-based modules, student interaction through discussion and group projects, hands-on instruction in horticultural skills, and synchronous video conferencing. Students at cooperating institutions will gain access to a broader range of expertise than currently available at any single institution.

The program will evolve based on industry needs.

Conservationists Lauded By District

MOUNT GRETN (Lebanon Co.) — The Lebanon County Conservation District recognized six individuals for outstanding conservation efforts in Lebanon County at the district's annual planning meeting and awards banquet.

Special guests, volunteers, and award winners were invited to celebrate in the conservation district's 51 years of accomplishments.

During the banquet, special recognition was awarded to two farmers, an educator, a rails-to-trails activist, a watershed volunteer, and a long-time conservation district employee.

Clean Water Farm Award

Charles and Marlene Bomgardner were recognized for their efforts in soil and water conservation on their 97-acre farm in North Annville Township.

The Bomgardners became cooperators with the district in 1993 and have continued the family tradition of conservation farming. The Bomgardners practice contour strip cropping with rotations that include use of no-till, minimum tillage, cover crops, and residue management.

Twenty-acres of more erodible land is left in permanent hay and woodland. The Bomgardners have cooperated with Penn State Extension in conducting field trials. The farm was preserved in 1993 through the county's agricultural land preservation board and is permitted for environmentally safe recycling of biosolids.

While not required, the Bomgardners volunteer to follow a nutrient management plan compliant with the commonwealth's Nutrient Management Law. The Bomgardners also practice conservation farming on their 80-plus rented acres.

Conservationist Of The Year

Robert "Flynn" Barnett of Fredericksburg was named Conservationist of the Year for his volunteer efforts in cooperating with numerous landowners within the Swatara Watershed to implement a variety of practices to stabilize streambanks and improve water quality.

Barnett has been a member of the Quittaphilla Watershed Association Steering Committee board member and co-chair of the Resource Management/Protection Committee of the Doc Fritchey Chapter of Trout Unlimited, and board member for the newly formed Little Swatara Watershed Association. He actively participated in restoring and stabilizing eroded streambanks with vegetation and fencing and has worked with the Quittaphilla Watershed Association and the "Adopt-A-Stream Program" of the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission to install fish habitat enhancement structures such as deflectors in the Quittaphilla Creek.

Educator Of The Year

Ralph D. Heister III, a biology teacher at Lebanon High School, was awarded the district's Educator of the Year Award.

A resident of North Cornwall Township, Heister has taught biology for five years at Lebanon

Heister challenged his 21 honors biology students to do a stream study investigating the effects of acid mine drainage on the Stony and Rausch Creek watersheds. The conclusions included in a 40-page report were presented at a meeting of the Swatara Watershed Association.

Heister also serves as the high school Envirothon adviser, educating students in soils, wildlife, forestry, aquatics, and a current environmental issue before competing among other high schools in a county event. Through his teaching, clubs, and personal actions, he has done a great deal to promote awareness of environmental issues and fostered excitement in his students about protecting our environment.

Landowner Of The Year

The Stan Bucher family of south Annville has been chosen to receive the Landowner of the Year Award.

The Buchers (Stan, his wife Cindy, and children Rachel and Matthew) are a conservation-minded family whom have a history of sound soil and water stewardship on their 116-acre dairy farm.

Stan's father Leroy signed the farm up as a conservation district cooperator in 1959. Fifteen years ago, before the value of fencing livestock out of streams was well known, the Bucher's fenced off Bachman Run to protect the stream from their cows. In 1999, they worked further with the Quittaphilla Watershed Association through a Watershed Restoration Assistance Program grant to complete their streambank fencing and livestock crossing projects.

cropping has been converted to contour strip-cropping on a 40-acre field. An animal waste system installed in 1985 provides six months of storage. Manure is incorporated within 24-hours to minimize potential run off pollution and maximize nutrient crop availability.

The Buchers have stopped using chemical fertilizer on corn ground. They utilize minimum tillage on most of their crop and small grain acreage with some no-till also employed.

Special Recognition For Conservation

John B. Wengert was honored for his outstanding support of community recreation and conservation. Wengert has donated hundreds of hours of his time to making the Lebanon Valley Rail Trail a reality when not at this demanding job at Wengert's Dairy.

Wengert returned to his Lebanon County roots after learning the ropes of rail-trail development from the National Rail-To-Trails organization in Washington, D.C. Seeing tremendous potential to develop this recreational resource locally, he set about the task of finding quality board members to help him put his expertise to work. After much hard work to gain nonprofit status, file for grants, conduct feasibility studies and public meetings, prepare plans, fundraise, select engineers and contractors, phase I of the Lebanon Valley Rail Trail is now a reality from Colebrook to the Rt. 72 overpass.

Phases of the trail to the Lancaster County line and city of Lebanon are in the works. John and his capable volunteers succeeded in raising in excess of $325,000 from local donors. John has also participated in other important initiatives such as Swatara Watershed Association Rivers Conservation Grant planning process and stream bank fencing and buffer planting with the district and DEP.

Groundwater Guardian Award

The Lebanon County Conservation District was also recognized for its work in groundwater education and conservation. Groundwater Guardian is a program of the Groundwater Foundation of Lincoln, Neb. that supports, recognizes, and connects communities that are protecting their groundwater resources. Groundwater Guardian is not a regulatory program, rather it relies on voluntary steps developed at the community level to address local groundwater protection priorities.

Lebanon County has been designated as a Groundwater Guardian Community for the past five years for activities conducted by the Lebanon County Groundwater Education Team, under the leadership of Betty Conner public director for the Lebanon County Conservation District. Other members of that team include the Lebanon County Office of Penn State Cooperative Extension, the Lebanon Water Authority, the Myerstown Water Authority, the Lebanon County Planning Department, and the League of Women Voters.

Some of the activities in process include participation in a phase 1 of an eight county surface and groundwater quality, quantity and use study with the Capitol Region Water Board, Susquehanna River Basin Commission, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers; securing funding for best management practices to be implemented on eight dairy farms; and filing for a grant with United States Geological Survey to test the effects of liming manure on phosphorus mobility.

The Safe Drinking Water Act Amendments of 1996 mandated that source water assessments must be conducted for all public drinking water system (the raw groundwater or surface water before treatment). Source water protection, however, is voluntary and responsibility rests with the local community or water system to take steps to prevent pollutants from reaching drinking water sources. Here is where Groundwater Guardian comes in to help communities by raising awareness about groundwater, providing information and resources, by inspiring and helping communities develop solutions, by supporting regional and national networks, and by providing recognition. The ultimate goal is preservation of an adequate supply of clean, safe drinking water for generations to come.

The following individuals were also recognized for their volunteer service with district programs: Connie Hoffer, Genevieve Mehler, Karen and Richard Light, James Logan Jr., Dian Beamesderfer, Pat Ziegler, Sue Miller, Jeanne and Jerry Boltz, Bob Arnold, Charlotte and Leon Gerberich, Carol Holt, Bill Wunderlich, the Quittaphilla Audubon Society, Dairy Queen East, Dutchway Farm Market, Inc., Hershey Foods, Inc., Milton Hershey Schools, Penn State Master gardeners, and the boards of the conservation district and agricultural land preservation.

Leigh Beamesderfer, forester naturalist, was recognized for her 15 years of service to the Lebanon County Conservation District. Beamesderfer is credited with developing and organizing the county Envirothon at elementary, middle, and high school levels. She is a member of the state Envirothon board.

She has formulated a comprehensive menu of environmental education programs available to all citizens from the conservation district. Recent Ag Camps organized by Beamesderfer providing hands-on experiences for children in agriculture have been sellouts. Her teacher training workshops have helped teachers get excited about environmental education and meet new state requirements.

Beamesderfer has been critical to community forestry initiatives in the city of Lebanon and serves as the coordinator for county gypsy moth spray efforts. Beamesderfer manages the annual seedling sale at the district which has seen tens of thousands of seedlings sold to county landowners.

Farmers Union Backs Congressional Call For Price Investigation

WASHINGTON, D.C. - National Farmers Union (NFU) recently praised the 35 members of the U.S. House of Representatives who have called on U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno to immediately investigate possible market abuses by the dairy processing and retail marketing industries. The letter asks the Department of Justice to investigate the widening gap between the price dairy farmers are paid for their product and what consumers pay at the grocery store, in the light of unprecedented concentration in the processing and grocery industries. "Farmers are receiving the lowest prices for milk in 20 years while consumers are seeing record high prices," said Leland Swenson, president of

NFU. "The merger mania that is sweeping our national and international markets is providing great economic windfalls for food traders. However, it is not providing the competition that allows farmers to receive a fair price for what they produce and families to find a fair price as they put food on their tables." The top eight milk processors now control almost half of the national market. In some areas of the country, one processor controls as much as 70 percent of the milk processing market. This has led to the lowest price levels paid to farmers in two decades. Meanwhile, skyrocketing retail milk prices are the reality in the highly concentrated grocery market. Five firms hold 42 percent of the grocery store market. In the Chicago grocery market, where two grocery chains dominate the market, stores are changing more than one dollar more per gallon of milk than in areas where more competition exists. "This summer, while producers were experiencing 20-year low prices, consumers in Chicago were paying record high prices," said Swenson. "This is contrary to what happens in a fair and open market. We applaud the members of Congress who are calling for this urgently needed investigation."

Farming Forecast

It will be quite cold through the remainder of the weekend and into the upcoming holiday week with snow showers around from time to time. A gusty west to northwesterly wind will be the rule, providing wind chills in the teens and 20s despite air temperatures in the 30s and low 40s. The snow showers that do move through will probably not bring much accumulation, but they can whiten the ground at times.

'The Right Stuff'

Turkey Sidekicks Dress Your Thanksgiving Weekend Meals

When your family or guests ask "What are you serving for Thanksgiving dinner?" they aren't asking if there will be turkey. After all, that's expected. Rather, they're interested in finding out what kind of stuffing and side dishes you'll be serving to complement the main attraction.

A perfect side dish any time of year, savory stuffing truly shines during the holidays and is as much a part of Thanksgiving tradition as parades and football games. While all stuffings contain a few common elements—such as select breads, herbs and spices—no two cooks prepare exactly the same style of stuffing.

For example, favorite family recipes feature a wide variety of breads, including white bread, cornbread, sourdough and rye. And many cooks add their signature touch to the recipe by including ingredients such as onions, celery, corn, cranberries and cheese.

Of course, after all the plates are washed on Thanksgiving night, you still have to plan meals throughout the rest of the long weekend. If you keep on hand some extra cans of soup and a bag of stuffing, you'll be prepared to turn those Thanksgiving leftovers into exciting new dinners.

So remember, having a memorable Thanksgiving dinner—as well as meals throughout the long weekend—is easy if you remember to focus on "the right stuff!"

Tips for Stuffing a Turkey

To ensure success when baking your stuffing inside the turkey, follow these simple tips from the experts at Pepperidge Farm:

- Stuff the turkey just before roasting, never ahead of time.
- Allow between 1/2 cup and 3/4 cup prepared stuffing per pound of turkey.
- Lightly spoon stuffing into cavity of bird to allow room for the stuffing to expand as it bakes.
- Bake a stuffed turkey at 325°F. or higher.
- After the turkey is done, check the stuffing temperature with a meat thermometer. Fully cooked stuffing should reach 165°F.
- Allow turkey to stand 20 minutes before removing stuffing and carving.
- Refrigerate leftover stuffing and use within two days. Or freeze stuffing and use within two months.

Love Those Leftovers

Many people anticipate a weekend of delicious Thanksgiving leftovers as much as they enjoy the main attraction. Here are a few tips to ensure your leftovers are gobbled up by Sunday night.

- Start a new family tradition by serving hot stuffing patties the morning after Thanksgiving. Combine approximately one part leftover mashed potatoes with two parts leftover stuffing. Shape into individual patties, then fry them in melted margarine. Brown on each side, making sure the middle is thoroughly heated.
- Say good-bye to dry leftovers by moistening leftover turkey and stuffing with seasoned chicken broth before reheating.
- Leftover soups help fight the chill in the air. Here are two suggestions:
 - To make an easy Turkey Noodle Soup, simply combine 2 cans of chicken broth with a cup of sliced celery and 1 cup of sliced carrots. Heat to a boil, then stir in one cup of uncooked noodles and 1 cup of leftover cubed turkey. Cook 10 minutes and you're ready to serve.
 - Stir seasoned chicken broth into leftover mashed potatoes to make a quick and delicious Potato Soup.
- Turkey Soft Tacos are a fun alternative to turkey sandwiches. Just roll strips of turkey into warm flour or corn tortillas, then add salsa, guacamole and shredded lettuce.
- Still haven't finished all of the turkey? Create a Waldorf turkey salad by mixing diced turkey with mayonnaise, chopped walnuts, celery, chopped apples and raisins. Serve on lettuce.

Making the Perfect Turkey Gravy

As the American diet has changed during the past few years, gravy has all but disappeared. Only on the most special of occasions do we allow ourselves the indulgence of this hearty sauce made from the poultry drippings.

The turkey drippings, both the browned bits and fat, provide the color and flavor needed for good gravy. Salt and pepper are essential ingredients as they enrich the natural flavors. The quality of any gravy is enhanced by adding turkey stock, wine or apple cider.

The art of gravy making can be a challenge to those who only prepare the robust sauce on special holiday occasions. To produce a full flavored gravy, it is critical to cook the flour in about an equal portion of fat until the flour loses its raw taste. A rather common problem is the temptation to use too much flour, which decreases the flavor. Remember that gravy will continue to thicken after it has been removed from the heat. A good rule is to use between 1 and 2 tablespoons of flour for each cup of liquid and then give the mixture time to thicken.

If a shortage of turkey gravy is a common occurrence at your house, double the turkey gravy recipe by using melted butter and extra warm turkey or poultry stock.

If your gravy is lumpy, with a whisk or rotary beater, beat the gravy until smooth. If all other attempts fail, use a food processor, strainer or blender. Reheat, stirring constantly; serve.

If slightly salty gravy is the problem, add several raw potato slices and cook until the potato slices are translucent. Remove the slices prior to serving. You could also try adding a few pinches of light brown sugar. Be sparing, or the gravy will become too sweet. If the oversalting is severe, the gravy must be repaired by increasing the quantity. Prepare another batch of gravy, omitting all salt. Blend the two batches together.

For gravy that is too light in color, add a teaspoon of instant coffee.

To thicken gravy, if time permits, allow the gravy to continue to simmer on the range top. If time does not allow, try blending until dissolved 1 teaspoon per cup of liquid in cold water and mix into gravy. Continue to cook and stir to eliminate the corn-starch flavor.

Try the same process with a paste of flour and cold water or a tablespoon of Arrowroot, which can be served as soon as the gravy thickens due to arrowroot's lack of taste.

Mixing starch with cold water before adding it to a hot mixture prevents lumping.

If the gravy is too thick, slowly whisk in more broth until the desired thickness is reached.

For greasy/fatty gravy, the fat can be skimmed off the top or soaked up with a fresh bread slice. If more time allows, chill the gravy, skim off the fat and reheat the gravy until it bubbles.

Featured Recipe

Today's featured recipe includes a recipe and an idea to add a special touch to your holiday table. Kathryn Wagner, Mount Joy, suggests preparing special table favors for each guest.

Here are directions for duplicating what she writes is a "very pretty favor:" Insert white votive candles inside small clear glass votive candleholders. Using a glue gun, glue fresh glossy bay leaves around the holder. Tie a bow around the middle with gold florist's ribbon.

For many families, serving duck for Thanksgiving dinner is a tradition they wouldn't miss. Kathryn writes that a great side dish for a Thanksgiving duck dinner is this wild rice salad.

WILD RICE SALAD

2 cups wild rice, cooked
1/2 cup white rice, cooked
1/2 cup diced red peppers
1/2 cup chopped tomato
1/4 cup green peas, cooked
1/4 cup red onion, diced
1/4 cup green beans, cooked, cut in bite-sized pieces
4 tablespoons apple juice concentrate 2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
2 tablespoons fresh basil, chopped
1 tablespoon fresh parsley, chopped
1 tablespoon fresh tarragon, chopped
1 tablespoon fresh lime juice
Salt and pepper to taste
Combine all ingredients in a bowl. Toss well. Serve chilled.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Some random thoughts as we prepare to celebrate our first Thanksgiving of the millennium...

I'm thankful for this way of life we take sooooo much for granted here in these free United States.

For markets and supermarkets and super-duper-super-center-markets, ready to sell us way more stuff than any of us could ever need, ever use or ever have place to store. Or to stomach.

For a society where diet challenges rise from our abundance, rather than from continuous worry about where our next bite of food will come from. (If only we could just figure out how to share it better).

For a stable economy where

"for hire" signs have replaced lines of folks waiting to sign up for unemployment assistance.

For the personal freedom and ability to drive my decade-old-plus little car to a service station to fill up with $1.60/gallon gas. It could just as easily be $3.60 per gallon. (Which, on the other hand, might FINALLY push us into a genuine focus on alternate energy sources).

For a society where we can endure the unbelievability of a cliff-hanger presidential election, its resultant legal challenges, vote counts, recounts, media hype, judicial rulings — with the only ensuing war being one of words. (Yes, we know. LOTS of words).

For watchdog agencies — some of which admittedly drive us nuts sometimes with their bureaucratic ways — which have kept at bay such health and economic threats as the ebola virus, "mad cow" disease and, most recently, at least temporarily halted the proposed importation to the U.S. of thousands of dairy cattle assembled in a region of the world rife with that most contagious bovine affliction: hoof-and-mouth disease.

For tremendous strides made in treating and curing cancers, and heartfelt prayers that the pace of research intensifies.

For telephone answering machines, for FAX technology, for computers (well, most of the time), checkout scanners, pagers, cell phones, pocket calculators — and all that stuff that helps us digitally type, tally, and keep in touch.

For dedicated teachers who still persist in teaching our kids to write and add, subtract and divide — by hand, despite the above. And to long-suffering school bus drivers who get our kids there safely and on time, day after day.

For policemen and firefighters and public servants who keep our environment and our streets and relatively safe, wage the thankless and unending battle against criminal elements, respond to accidents, save lives and still take time to remind legions of little kids to "look both ways" before crossing the street.

For good neighbors who alert us if we have cattle out or ailing in far-off pastures, drop by with their packaged newspapers for recycling as heifer bedding, wave as they job by, mow our distant farm road edges as they tend their own lawns, and, especially, for their friendship.

For our team of farm employees who faithfully assist in tending to cows, crops, and assorted crises, through weekends, holidays, 100-degree days, gully-washer rains and blowing blizzards. Ditto for milk haulers.

For the great pleasure of getting knocked off my feet several times a week by a trio of grandchildren — and an aging, overweight yellow Lab — charging into the house, or barn, or yard to bless grandma and grandpa with big bear hugs.

For family close by to celebrate holidays — and plain every days — filled with a couple of generations of terrific cooks. For turkey and stuffing and mashed potatoes and sweet potatoes and garden salads and corn and beans and cranberry sauce and hot rolls and gravy and...desserts!

For having to go back out to do barn chores a few hours after all that to work it off.

And for the freedom to be able to bow our heads to offer thanks for our abundance of blessings.

Enjoy your Thanksgiving!

Family Finances Top Secret?

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Some parents just do not want to burden the children with the family financial planning. They reserve the headaches for Mom and Dad. Other parents simply are too secretive about such planning. These parents don't seem to think that their children can be trusted with information about the financial status of the family.

Regardless of the reason, the result is the same — the children never have an opportunity to learn the practical day-by-day financial workings of a family.

Teen-agers especially need some practical experience. They will soon be starting families of their own and will probably be experiencing the same concerns. It can well be asked, "Where do young people learn?"

Many young people who marry suddenly realize they don't have the foggiest notion of what insurance they need or don't need, how much to save, what percentage of the family budget should be allotted for food, and so forth.

It is surprising how some parents will criticize their older children for the way they spend their money. Comments like, "I just don't understand this younger generation" or "When I was your age" are frequently heard. And yet these very parents have never sat down with their child and attempted to help him or her understand the complex financial aspects of the family.

It is also surprising how few families encourage the older children to be present when the time arrives to work on the income tax. Some parents would not even think of including the teenager in this tolerated exercise each year. Yet, is there a better place to learn?

Again, regardless of the reason, it isn't doing the teen-ager in your family a favor when you leave him or her out of the family financial planning. The family is still the first schoolhouse and parents can be the most influential teachers.

Gilbert Will Clarify Checking Old Deeds

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Geri Gilbert, archivist at the Lancaster County Court House, will discuss "Checking Old Deeds" on Monday evening, Nov. 27, at 7:30 p.m. at the Lancaster Mennonite Historical Society, 2215 Millstream Road, Lancaster.

The meeting is sponsored by Grave Concern, Inc.; a recognized non-profit organization, promotes the preservation, restoration and maintenance of historic burial places throughout Lancaster County and facilitates the gathering and exchange of information through regular educational, historical and technical assistance programs. It also administers funds for such purposes. Historic Burial Places are, by definition, graveyards in which burials were made more than 100 years ago and none within the past 50 years.

Many early deeds for farms on which family cemeteries were placed included restrictions and/or mandates for care and responsibility of these plots. Over the years, as title passed from one person to another, in many cases such restrictions and mandates were dropped from the wording in the deeds. Nonetheless, in most cases, such restrictions are legally applicable today but may not be known without a search of early deeds.

Lighten Up Thanksgiving Dinner

Holiday meals don't have to pack such a high calorie punch. Simple makeover tips can lighten a meal and keep the taste good:

- Baked turkey — choose a plain bird over a self-basting bird to lower the sodium content. To ensure a moist bird, bake unstuffed, leave the skin on while roasting and remove from the oven when internal temperature reaches 180 degrees in the breast.

- Gravy — use a gravy cup or refrigerate the pan juices (to harden the fat) and skim the fat off before making gravy. Save around 56 grams of fat per cup!

- Dressing — use a little less bread and add more onions, celery, vegetables or even fruits such as cranberries and apples.

- Candied yams — leave out the margarine and marshmallows. Sweeten with fruit juice, such as apple, and flavor with cinnamon.

- Green bean casserole — cook fresh green beans with chunks of potatoes instead of cream soup. Top with almonds instead of fried onion rings.

- Mashed potatoes — use skim milk, garlic powder and a little Parmesan cheese instead of whole milk and butter.

- Bread — serve smaller pieces or omit.

Use low-cal margarine.

Ronda Merritt nicknamed the "Martha Stewart" of Dillsburg is already preparing Christmas gifts in her kitchen. Last year she estimates she gave away 40-50 cake-in-the-jar presents, 50 smelly jelly gifts, and numerous jars filled with homemade apple butter or salsa.

Meet 'Martha Stewart' Of Dillsburg

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

DILLSBURG (York Co.) — The aroma of pumpkin spice and chocolate mingles in the farmhouse kitchen of Ronda Merritts.

Known as the "Martha Stewart" of Dillsburg, Ronda is already at work preparing holiday gifts for friends, coworkers, and relatives.

While she works, she glances out the spacious windows that overlook Diamond 7 Ranch and Arena. It's where her husband Jim is busy preparing for one of the 40 horse shows the farm hosts annually.

Although Ronda serves as a registered emergency technician (EMT) for the horse shows, works as a claims examiner for Blue Cross Insurance Company, and helps with duties on the horse farm, she said, that she is happiest in the kitchen. She keeps the family, which includes Cassandra, 17; Jessica, 15; and Travis, 12, satisfied and energized with homemade meals. After the evening meal is finished, Ronda doesn't relax. Instead she cans in-season produce, decorates wedding cakes for clients, or experiments with a new recipe.

This time of the year finds her preparing holiday gifts. She estimates that she gave away 40-50 cake-in-the-jar presents, 50 smelly jelly gifts, and numerous gift baskets packed with apple-butter, salsa, and other home-made goodies.

"I'd rather give a homemade gift than a store-bought one," Ronda said of the personalized effort behind the presents. "I get so many ideas and recipes from Lancaster Farming."

"I've been intrigued with cooking ever since I can remember," said Ronda, who grew up watching her mother and grandmother cook and preserve food.

At age 17, Ronda was decorating wedding cakes. At age 23, she was teaching cooking classes in a local kitchen specialty shop.

Ronda is alarmed that many women no longer preserve food or prepare meals from scratch.

"I'm afraid cooking is becoming a dying art," she said. She encourages novice cooks to follow established recipes in the beginning.

"After you feel confident, you can step out and experiment," she said. "One thing I learned is that it doesn't hurt to change a recipe."

Ronda said that many beginners are afraid to try. She counsels, "If you burn something, throw it away and keep going."

I don't think there is anyone who can't cook, if they keep trying."

It is reassuring to have a friend or relative to consult for cooking advice. Ronda said, "I remember calling my grandmother late at night if something didn't turn out right. It took me six batches to produce monkey bread that tasted like hers."

Some of her favorite foods to can are peaches, pears, tomatoes, salsa, and spaghetti sauce.

Although she maintains a garden, most of the that she processes is purchased from farmer's markets.

"Jim and Travis go to hay sales where produce is being sold. They bring things home at the most inopportune times, but that's how it is when you can and freeze. You need to do it (produce) when its ready, not when its convenient."

Ronda has always made an effort to teach her own children how to cook and preserve food. This summer, Ronda was pleased to see her 15-year-old daughter teach a friend how to can peaches.

"Jessica is the one most likely to follow in my footsteps," Ronda said of her "Martha Stewart" reputation.

Patience and calmness are virtues to which Ronda lays claim. Although both traits are assets in the kitchen, they are even more beneficial as a mother and EMT. A few months ago, these traits were in demand when the Merritts' son's thumb was ripped off during a rodeo roping incident.

Travis, who earned the state designation as all-round cowboy when he was only five years old, participates in numerous roping events. But on Aug. 24, his thumb caught in the rope, a common injury among rodeo ropers, according to Jim. They immediately stuck his thumb in ice in order to enable doctors to reattach it.

Jim and Ronda Merritt, with children Jessica and Travis, operate Diamond 7 Ranch and Arena, Dillsburg.

Ronda explained that the thumb was basically amputated by the accident, which required all nerves and arteries to be reattached during surgery.

Travis said that he felt no pain from the accident. While in the emergency room, his first question was "When can I rope again?"

After a six-day stay at the Philadelphia Children's Hospital, doctors determined that the reattachment was a success and sent Travis home.

Although brave and calm during the ordeal and his subsequent four-day stay in the intensive care unit, Travis recalls that three weeks after the event, he almost passed out.

He wears a bandage on his thumb, but everything seems to be progressing well, and Travis is again working with the horses.

"It was top-hand surgeons and faith in the Lord that brought us through," Ronda said of the successful reattachment.

The Merritts own Diamond 7 Ranch and Arena with Jim's parents, Jim and Connie Merritts. Jim grew up breaking saddle ponies, roping, and working cattle. It seemed a natural progression to buy the 160-acre property seven years ago. In addition to growing hay on their own acreage, they also rent additional land for that purpose.

The Merritts horse show facility includes 215 stalls and a show ring. They also have 56 recreation vehicle hookups available for participants.

"People come from as far away as Florida and Colorado to compete in the shows," Jim said.

For the most part, Merritts rent out the grounds to horse clubs and associations for shows, which means, the Merritts are responsible for preparing the grounds and clean up, but not for the actual planning of the shows. The first year in business, they held three shows; this past year, 40.

"Like everything else, horse show business depends on the economy," Merritt said.

In winter months, Ronda enjoys incorporating this South Bend cookstove into her cooking ventures. Last year, she prepared the family Thanksgiving dinner in it.

The family owns 12 quarter-horses and raises steers for roping events. The Merritts' children, all active 4-H'ers, compete in many of the events. They also help their dad stack hay and prepare for the shows.

"I've been riding all my life," Jessica said. Her favorite is the team penning event, which requires two people to cut three head of cattle out of a herd of 30 and herd them into a pen in the opposite end of the arena.

"Last weekend I won buckle, for fourth in penning during the summer series," Jessica said.

When she was 11-years-old, Jessica placed eighth in the state in competition for pole bending.

Cassandra rides and trains horses. She is a member of the Keystone Quarterhorse Youth Team. Cassandra's involvement in horse events is curtailed by her career as a massage therapist.

Ronda collects food tins and cow memorabilia and is secretary of The National Barrel Horse Association. But none of these hobbies compare with the intrigue of the kitchen.

One of the easiest recipes that Ronda enjoys preparing is Crockpot Apple Butter or Peach Butter.

"In no time at all, you can have a batch without a whole lot of mess," she said.

Here is the recipe:

APPLEBUTTER

8 cups apples
4 cups sugar
2 teaspoons cinnamon

Combine ingredients and cook on low six hours. Puree. Cook additional five hours with lid off on high temperature. Ladle into jars. Refrigerate or process in boiling water bath to can.

SMELLY JELLIES

(Air Freshner)

Use baby food jars, votive holders, custard cups, decorative glasses and 4-ounce jars

16-ounces liquid potpourri
4 packets unflavored gelatin
Colorant, if desired Thoroughly heat half the liquid poppourri, just to boiling. Mix in 4 packets gelatin until dissolved, add remaining liquid potpourri. Pour into containers, and mixture will set up.

Attach the following poem: Here's a little something for your home or your car. A homemade gift from me to you — smelly jelly in a jar. It's a liquid when poured into a jar and not to be eaten, not for your belly, but to refreshen your room, for it's called smelly jelly in a jar.

Let's Talk Turkey Facts, History

From the first Thanksgiving to today's turkey burgers, turkeys are a part of the American tradition dating back hundreds of years. However, many of us still know little about the birds. The following are answers to some of the most commonly asked questions about turkeys.

According to the National Turkey Foundation's website, www.eatturkey.com, early explorers to the New World quickly acquired a taste for turkey and took birds back to Europe. By the 1500s, turkeys were being raised domestically in Italy, France and England.

When the Pilgrims and other settlers arrived in America, they were already familiar with raising and eating turkey and naturally included it as part of their Thanksgiving feast.

Some experts think the first Thanksgiving dinner was served by the Pilgrims in 1621. Others credit the settlers of Virginia's Jamestown with celebrating the first Thanksgiving as their version of England's ancient Harvest Home Festival.

President Abraham Lincoln proclaimed Thanksgiving a national holiday in 1863, supposedly as a response to a campaign organized by magazine editor Sara Joseph Hale. In 1939, President Franklin Roosevelt moved Thanksgiving Day forward one week, as it is presently celebrated.

Benjamin Franklin, who proposed the turkey as the official United States' bird, was dismayed when the bald eagle was chosen over the turkey. Franklin wrote to his daughter, referring to the eagle's "bad moral character," saying, "I wish the bald eagle had not been chosen as the representative of our country! The turkey is a much more respectable bird, and withal a true original native of America."

Since 1947, the National Turkey Federation (NTF) has presented the President of the United States with a live turkey and two dressed turkeys in celebration of Thanksgiving. The annual presentation of the National Thanksgiving Turkey to the President has become a traditional holiday ritual in the nation's capital, signaling the unofficial beginning of the holiday season and providing the President an opportunity to reflect publicly on the meaning of the Thanksgiving season.

After the ceremony, the live bird retires to a historical farm to live out the rest of its years.

In 1999, about 273 million turkeys were raised. The NTF estimates that 45 million of those turkeys were eaten at Thanksgiving, 22 million at Christmas and 19 million at Easter.

Ninety-two percent of Americans surveyed by the National Turkey Federation eat turkey at Thanksgiving. The average weight of turkeys purchased for Thanksgiving is 15 pounds, meaning that approximately 675 million pounds of turkey are consumed in the U.S. each Thanksgiving.

The top five most popular ways to serve leftover Thanksgiving turkey are: sandwich, soup or stew, casserole, stir-fry, and salad.

In fact, turkey is most often prepared in a sandwich year-round. However, low-fat, convenient products like ground turkey, turkey sausage and turkey bacon, as well as turkey cutlets and tenderloins, are becoming increasingly popular.

Many people report drowsiness after eating Thanksgiving dinner. While turkey often receives the blame, recent studies suggest that carbohydrate-rich meals may cause sleepiness by increasing the number of tryptophans in the brain.

Therefore the unusually large, multi-coursed, carbohydrate-rich meal most people eat on Thanksgiving is more likely the cause.

The white meat is generally preferred in the U.S. while other countries choose the dark meat. A 15-pound turkey typically has about 70 percent white meat and 30 percent dark meat. The two types of meat differ nutritionally. White meat has fewer calories and less fat than dark meat. The rich flavor of dark meat is especially valued in soup and stew recipes. Dark meat holds up well in rich marinades and is a perfect choice for grilling and barbecuing.

When Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin sat down to eat their first meal on the moon, their foil food packets contained roasted turkey and all of the trimmings.

It is estimated that turkeys have 3,500 feathers at maturity.

The bulk of turkey feathers are composted or otherwise disposed of; however, some feathers may be used for special purposes. For instance, dyed feathers are used to make American Indian costumes or as quills for pens. The costume that "Big Bird" wears on "Sesame Street" is rumored to be made of turkey feathers. Turkey feather down has been used to make pillows. For commercial use, turkey skins are tanned and used to make items like cowboy boots, belts or other accessories.

Turkey consumption has more than doubled over the past 25 years. In 1999, per capita turkey consumption was 18 pounds compared to 8.7 pounds in 1974. America celebrates turkey during June, National Turkey Lovers' Month.

Turkey is low in fat and high in protein. The USDA's Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommend 2-3 servings each day from the category that contains meat, poultry, fish, dry beans, eggs and nuts. Choosing turkey to meet those dietary guidelines means giving your body the benefits of protein while sparing additional fat grams and cholesterol.

Domesticated turkeys cannot fly. Wild turkeys can fly for short distances up to 55 miles per hour and can run 20 miles per hour. Only tom turkeys gobble while hen turkeys make a clicking noise./l

Stuffing Or Dressing?

According to "Joy of Cooking" the original name is stuffing. The term "dressing" comes from the Victorian England, when the term "stuf-ing" was thought to be improper.

ANSWER — E. H. Martin, New Holland, wanted to know how to make frozen bread dough. Thanks to Pat Elligson, Millers, Md., for writing that she saw a Julia Child's television cooking show where bread baking was demonstrated. Child's said that you can use your own bread dough recipe. Prepare according to directions. Let the dough rise once. Punch down and shape into roll shapes or bread. Place on a flat surface in the freezer until frozen. Store in a freezer bag frozen until ready to bake. To bake, place rolls on greased pan or sheet in a cold oven. Set temperature to degrees directed in your recipe, timing from when the oven reaches the required temperature. The rolls rise as oven is heats.

Here is the directions for brown and serve rolls.

Brown And Serve Rolls

Use your favorite recipe. When rolls have been shaped and have not quite doubled in bulk, bake in a 275 degree oven. Bake until firm to touch, but not browned (25-30) minutes. Cool. Wrap and freeze.

To serve, place on cookie sheet, bake at 400 degrees until brown (7-15 minutes) according to size.

Thanks to an anonymous reader for sending the following recipe for frozen bread.

Freezer Bread

4 tablespoons yeast
4 cups flour
½ cup sugar
⅓ cup shortening
2 tablespoons salt
4 cups warm water

Mix all dry ingredients including yeast. Add shortening and warm water. Mix very well. Add in 2 more cups flour and mix well. Add 1 cup flour, thereafter, at a time, approximately 9-11 cups total. Knead well and grease top and let rise for 15 minutes in warm place. Divide into 5 loaves and place in greased pans. Freeze immediately. Can be frozen up to six months. To bake immediately, let rise and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Another method, also sent in by Lydia Lapp, is to place 2 cups seeds in 1 quart of water with 1 teaspoon salt. Soak overnight. Drain in colander, dry on towel. Put into 130-150 degree oven on cookie sheets until dry and crisp. Place in gas oven with 130-degree pilot light. Heat for two hours.

ANSWER — Marsha Wagner, Mount Wolf, wanted a recipe for the "Snickers" dessert served at Shady Maple Smorgasbord. Thanks to Julie Kostenbauder, Hellam, for sending a recipe.

2 golden delicious apples, cored, cut into bite-sized pieces
2 Granny Smith apples, cored, cut into bite-sized pieces

ANSWER — Ronda Merritts, Dillsburg, lost the recipes printed last year for cakes baked-in-a-jar and requested readers favorites. Thanks to Nancy Leid for sending one that was originally sent it from Bob Rumer, Jenkintown.

Gingerbread Baked In Jars

2¼ cups all-purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons ginger
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
½ teaspoon ground cloves
1 cup margarine, softened
¾ cups hot water
½ cup molasses
Preheat oven to 325-degrees for jars. Grease five 12-ounce jelly jars - must have straight sides, no bulges in the jars. Also the jars must be sterilized by boiling in hot water bath for 10 minutes, leave the lids and rings in the water until ready to use, remove the jars and allow to air dry and cool before greasing. Use a pastry brush to grease jars with shortening. Do not use vegetable oil spray.

In large bowl, combine flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda, salt, ginger, cinnamon, and cloves. Stir in margarine, water, and molasses until well blended. Divide equally into five jars. Place jars on a cookie sheet to prevent them from tipping over.

Bake 35-40 minutes or until cake tester inserted deep in center of each jar comes out clean. Have lids hot. Take one jar at a time from the oven (using heavy-duty mitts, the jars are hot!) Place a lid and tighten with a ring. Allow to cool on countertop. You'll know when jars have sealed when you hear a plinking sound. If you don't hear the sound, wait until the jars have cooled, then press down on the jar lids, they shouldn't move at all.

If you'd like to decorate the jars, wait until they're cooled completely. Remove the ring (the lids have sealed by now) and place a wad of cotton in center of each lid; place a piece of decorative cloth (about 3-inches larger in circumference than jar lid, cut out with pinking shears, and place over cotton. Screw the ring back on.

Turkey Tips

What would Thanksgiving be without the hum of activity in the kitchen? Since the turkey is the centerpiece of many Thanksgiving meals, it may pay to educate yourself about your turkey purchasing options. •Frozen turkeys are flash frozen immediately after processing to 0 degrees or below and held at that temperature until packaged. The meat, once defrosted, is virtually at the same freshness as the day it was processed. •Fresh turkeys are deep chilled after packaging. They have a shorter shelf life and are, therefore, usually more expensive. •Processors may add convenience or value-added features to whole turkeys, including pop-up timers, net bags for easy carrying and self-basting solutions injected into the bird for added flavor. Consumers can choose which of these options best suit their needs.

•Purchase one pound of turkey per person to be served. This formula allows for the holiday meal plus a little left over for the prized turkey sandwich.

•Ensure that the packaging is intact and avoid purchasing a bird with packaging which has rips or tears.

•Save on supermarket specials by purchasing more than one turkey. A whole frozen turkey may be stored in your freezer for up to 12 months. Select the size of turkey based on number of servings needed.

•There is no appreciable difference between female (hen) and male (tom) turkeys in tenderness, white/dark meat ratio or other eating qualities. Hens typically weigh up to 14 to 16 pounds and toms 15 pounds on up, so choose the size which best fits the number of dinner guests you expect.

•Select alternative turkey cuts if you are having a small gathering for the holiday. Other turkey products which are readily available include a turkey breast, tenderloins, cutlets, drumsticks or thighs. Or ask your butcher to cut a whole fresh bird in two halves, roast one half and freeze the other half for a later occasion.

Kids — Stress And The Holidays

While we talk about adults having stress during the holiday, kids can also be stressed out!

How often have you been to the mall and watched children go right into the rebellion mode with wails of crying while parents insist on sitting them on the lap of some over-weight, white bearded, funny-looking suited stranger? Now doesn't that sound like fun?

Or how about insisting that kids go along shopping in an over-crowded clothing department, or the tool section, or better yet the fine dinnerware area where crawling under and over everything in sight or playing hide and seek is the only thing a kid can think to do.

Or how about at the family traditional dinner where relatives the children haven't seen in a year want to hug, pinch a cheek, or ask a series of questions the child has no clue how to answer.

I get stressed just thinking about it. So how does a child manage not to be stressed?

Generally, the holidays often means missed naps, delayed meals, and over-stimulating activities. It may also mean a change of routines, traveling, missing events, and being tossed into unique situations that can be uncomfortable. Children can respond to all this excitement just as we do — rebel, except they are usually a little more demonstrative than we adults do.

While adults are busy getting things ready — cleaning, shopping, planning, talking, etc., we tend to forget that children of all ages still need the same amount of attention as before the holiday season. Here are some suggestions that may be helpful for your family:

• Keep a Routine

Children need to have a sense that there is continuity in their lives. During the holiday season there are more activities, more relatives, more confusion, all of which breaks the routine of everyday living. When possible keep mealtime and bedtime as close to normal as possible to reduce some of the stress.

• Discipline Matches The Child's Age

During the holiday season, discipline can become a problem. Children are excited about all the events and we need to remember certain behaviors are natural and appropriate for certain age groups.

For example, expecting a 2- or 3-year-old to stand still while you look for anything but toys isn't going to happen.

Children still need attention and will get it one way or another, which often means misbehaving. Make the discipline appropriate to the child's age and behavior. Having children miss a meal because they misbehaved would be inappropriate. Which lead me to the next suggestion.

• Quiet Time

Taking time out is a good idea for both children and adults. If it is discipline matter — the rule of thumb is one minute for each age of the child. Quiet time can also be used to settle family members down after a busy day or event. Children need us to spend time with them, listening and reflecting on what they say and feel. It is easy for us to say, "Wait until after I finish what ever," but avoid that if possible.

There's no better way to really enjoy the holidays with your family than to sit and relax with one another. One of my favorite times is about a half an hour before scheduled bedtime. Reading a story or telling each other about your day. Perhaps that can be one of those unwrapped presents that will last all year.

1999 Farm Fatality Figures Show Overall Decline But Children's Rate Rises

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The summary of fatal farm accidents for 1999 has just been completed and it shows some dramatic changes in the total number of fatalities, as well as fatalities related to tractors on Pennsylvania farms, and fatalities involving children.

The total number of fatalities dropped from 45 in 1998 to 30 last year. Until this recent drop-off, the fatality numbers have remained rather constant with 46 fatalities in 1997 and 44 fatalities in 1996.

The biggest factor in this dramatic decline is fatalities from tractor overturns. Seven deaths occurred from overturns in 1999, compared to 20 fatalities in 1998 from overturns, and 14 the year before.

Deaths involving children, however, rose steeply in 1999. Ten kids, age 14 and under, died in accidents last year, up sharply from our fatalities in 1998. Accidental deaths involving machinery declined in 1999, with six machinery-related deaths last year, opposed to nine in 1998.

Fatalities involving animals stayed roughly constant with three fatalities in 1999, and two deaths involving animals the previous year. Deaths from non-tractor and machinery stayed at six in 1999 from six in 1998.

The summer months were the most deadly on Pennsylvania farms in 1999, with five fatalities occurring each month in May, June and July.

'A Scoop For You, Two For Me' Says Little Dairy Miss

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff
LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Six-year-old Jaylene Leshner wears a tiara and banner with the title "Berks County Little Miss Dairy Princess."
She travels around Berks County to tell others about milk's goodness. She rides in parades, talks with important people in government, and meets hundreds of children and adults at schools, nursing homes, and promotional events.
She still finds time to attend first grade at Strausstown Elementary School and play with her brother Joshua, 8, and sister Laura, 4.
Jaylene isn't shy. She speaks clearly and confidently. Recently, Jaylene stood before hundreds of people attending the Berks County Farm City Banquet. This is what she said:

*I like milk
I like ice cream
Do you like milk and ice cream?
I do!
Milk is the best
To run fast
To get strong bones
And to make happy smiles.
I like milk
Three glasses a day
I like ice cream
A scoop for you, two for me!
I like milk
I like ice cream
Do you like milk and ice cream?
I do!*
Then, Jaylene lifted a glass of milk and said, "Good food, good milk, good friends! Cheers!"

Berks County Little Miss Dairy Princess Jaylene Leshner, daughter of William and Lolly Leshner, travels the county telling others how much she likes milk and how strong and happy it makes her.

The President's Speech

President Abraham Lincoln gave the Gettysburg Address probably his most famous speech, in November 1863, when he was invited to dedicate a cemetery for Union Soldiers who had died in the Civil War

Today, there are five known copies of the 'Gettysburg Address.' Two are in the Library of Congress. Originally, Lincoln gave these to his private secretaries, John Nicolay and John Hay. The copy he gave Nicolay, which is on exhibit at the Library of Congress, may have been the first draft of the speech, or it may have been what Lincoln read the day of the speech.

When Nicolay died, his copy was given to Hay. After Hay died, his relatives gave both copies to the Library of Congress.

In order to preserve the copies of the address, Dr. Nathan Stolow made state-of-the-art environmental containers to hold them. These containers have heavy gauge stainless steel inner supports and two outer frames. They are filled with a low-moisture gas, so no oxygen can destroy the documents. They are kept in a low-temperature vault, which has other valuable documents.

In addition to the copies Lincoln gave his secretaries, he wrote other copies of the address when he returned to Washington, D.C. One is on display in the Lincoln Room of the White House, and another is at the Illinois State Historical Library.

MILK. IT DOES A BODY GOOD.™

Smart Stuff

WITH TWIG WALKINGSTICK

Why do we need calcium?

Calcium helps our bones and teeth stay strong, and it also keeps us healthy. Our bodies use calcium in muscle contraction, blood clotting and maintenance of cell membranes. Without it, we'd be in big trouble!

There are many foods that contain calcium. In fact, 75 percent of the calcium we consume comes from dairy products—especially milk, cheese, ice cream, and yogurt. We can also get large amounts of calcium from enriched cereals, juices and other calcium-enriched foods. Breakfast is a good time to get calcium—a plain English Muffin with raisins, two 4-inch plain, buckwheat or whole-wheat pancakes, or one medium-sized bran muffin is packed with calcium. We get about 62 percent of our recommended daily allowance of calcium from vegetables. Meat, poultry and fish provide us with about 3.4 percent of our daily calcium intake. Milk, however, remains the best source. The white stuff has just what our body needs to absorb and use calcium efficiently.

Make sure you eat a balanced diet—it's the best way to ensure your body gets enough calcium and other nutrients.

Twig

Refuse To Be A Victim

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — Do you fear being mugged?

Are you afraid your car or house might be burglarized?

Deputy Sheriff Jackie Weaknecht believes one can refuse to be a victim.

"A victim's personality plays a key role," Weaknecht said about the chances of being victimized by a criminal. "Criminals want an easy target. You stand a much better chance of preventing criminal attack if you make yourself difficult to prey upon."

In a recent presentation at the Berks County Cooperative Extension, Weaknecht wiped out preconceived ideas people have about criminals and about personal safety.

"Criminals want to blend in with the crowd, and try to gain your trust," she said. "You can't easily identify them."

Physical Security

To protect oneself, Weaknecht offered the following advice:

"It's a known fact that when frightened, people's motor skills leave them, and they become all thumbs."

Jackie Weaknecht
Deputy Sheriff

- Be alert and aware of your surroundings, especially when leaving shopping malls, because criminals know you are probably carrying cash, checkbooks, credit cards, or valuable merchandise.

- Make eye contact with strangers.

- Wear shoulder bag strap across your body. Money belts are even better, but fanny bags can easily be removed.

- Don't lay down packages.

- Keep packages in front of you.

- When walking in a parking lot, have one hand free with keys out and ready.

- If you see someone who makes you feel uneasy, don't walk toward them. Car Security

Weaknecht recommends looking beneath your car before entering it. In some instances, criminals are known to hide beneath the car and grab the ankles of the victims.

Deputy Sheriff Jackie Weaknecht explains the importance of having a personal safety strategy in place before you need it. "You stand a much better chance of preventing criminal attack if you make yourself difficult to prey upon," she said.

- Get in the car and lock it immediately.

- Start the car. If necessary, you will be prepared to leave immediately. Weaknecht said, "It's a known fact that when frightened, people's motor skills leave them and they become all thumbs."

- Keep anything of value out of sight in a locked car. Desperate criminals are known to break inside a car when spotting loose change.

Home Security

At home do not leave a wallet or money lying in an area that can be easily spotted from a criminal looking in a window.

Recently a rash of home invasions have been happening even while the homeowner is at home. A common scam is for someone to ring the doorbell and distract the homeowner while a partner in crime enters through a rear door and grabs jewelry, money and other valuables.

- Do not open the door to a stranger. Weaknecht recommends installing a wide-angle door viewer to identify people on your doorstep.

- Never tell a stranger you are home alone. Do not broadcast your plans in public where others can overhear.

- Keep trees and shrubbery around your home well-trimmed. Overgrown bushes and trees provide excellent hiding places for criminals. Instead plant defensive shrubbery (bushes with thorns, stiff, spiky leaves) around the home, especially beneath windows.

- Never hide a key under a mat, in a flower pot or other easily accessible place. Criminals know all the hiding places.

Phone Security

- Do not give information to strangers on the telephone.

- If you have an answering machine, do not announce your name and number as part of the message. Weaknecht explained that criminals sometimes dial numbers randomly, and may not remember which number they dialed unless repeated by the answering machine.

- Consider keeping a separate line or cellular phone as a security device. Criminals often taking a phone receiver off the hook, which renders other units on the line inoperable. A cellular phone in your bedroom is a good precaution.

- Never give important information such as credit card numbers when using a cellular phone. For less than $100, anyone can buy scanning devices and listen in on cellular phone conversations.

Weaknecht recommends the 3-hour course, NRA Refuse to Be A Victim, which is available throughout the U.S. For information about courses in your area, call 1-800-861-1166.

Hunters, Hosts Must Keep Safety In Mind

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — When Pennsylvania deer season begins on Nov. 27, an estimated one million hunters will head for the woods. Both hunters and landowners need to keep safety in mind.

Many hunters use the property of farmers and other landowners," said Earle Robbins, Tioga County extension director for Penn State Cooperative Extension and certified hunting safety instructor. "Cooperation and mutual understanding between hunters and hosts is the key to keeping everyone involved safe and satisfied."

If hunters are guests on your property this year, make sure they are responsible and mature. "If you have any doubts about the behavior of hunters who ask to use your land, it's probably best to say no," Robbins warns. "Make sure your guests know how you expect the land to be treated and ask if they have any questions about the property or your expectations."

Check your property before letting anyone use it. "Walk around your land before the season starts and look for hazards," Robbins says. "Your guests aren't as familiar with your land as you are, so you may see dangers they wouldn't. Warn hunters about hazards and post warning signs if needed. If you want parts of your land left alone, say so."

Hunters never should assume they have a right to hunt on property not posted with "no trespassing" signs. "Always ask permission to hunt on private property," Robbins says. "Hunting and trapping are privileges in Pennsylvania. A license does not entitle you to trespass on private lands."

If you get permission, ask the landowner about potential hazards on the property and whether any sections are off-limits. "Always obey the owner's rules and respect his or her property," Robbins says. "Behave the way you would like a guest to behave in your home."

Hunters must strictly follow Pennsylvania Game Commission rules on safety. Wear at least 250 square inches of fluorescent orange material on the head, chest and back. Camouflage fluorescent orange may satisfy this regulation if the total orange content is at least 250 square inches.

Remember that it's illegal to hunt within 150 yards of any occupied residence, camp, industrial or commercial building, school or playground without permission. This creates a safety zone roughly the size of one and a half football fields."

Always follow basic gun safety rules. "Handle a gun as if it's loaded, even if you're positive it's not," he says. "It's an extremely bad idea to cross a fence or stream with a loaded firearm. Unload it and place it through the fence before you go over or under. Never stand a loaded gun against a tree, wall or vehicle where it could be knocked over and discharged. Unload it and place it on a flat surface instead."

Finally, Robbins advises hunters and their hosts to promote safety by reporting violations and injuries to the Pennsylvania Game Commission as soon as possible. "If you have questions about specific hunting regulations, contact the game commission." Robbins also recommends "A Digest of Pennsylvania Hunting and Trapping Regulations," published by the game commission. "It's an excellent summary of regulations and offers many safe hunting tips," he said.

Tips For Reducing Home Heating Costs

RUTGERS, N.J. — As winter approaches, it is a good time to consider ways to reduce home heating costs. Below are some suggestions from Rutgers Cooperative Extension housing and energy specialist, Dr. Joseph Ponnessa:

- Install at least six-inches of fiberglass batt insulation or its equivalent (R19). Equally important — and easy to do — is insulation and weatherstripping of doors and other openings leading to the attic.
- Caulk and/or weatherstrip all doors, windows, and structural joints. Large amounts of cold air also enter through openings such as electrical boxes on outside walls. Air flow can be stopped with inexpensive cover plates. Exhaust fans should be covered when not in use.

- If you don't have storm windows, a sheet of plastic film, tightly applied to the window frame, will be almost as effective, saving about $12 per year for an average-sized window. Many home supply stores also sell inexpensive kits that include clear plastic to cover windows.
- One of the most important energy saving purchases is an annual tuneup of your oil burner. Make sure this includes cleaning of the heat exchange surfaces. Filters should be changed regularly in hot air furnaces.

- Automatic setback thermostats can also provide substantial savings (or the thermostat can be turned down at night).

• If you have a hot water heater, an inexpensive insulation jacket will save from $25 to $40 per year. Be sure to follow installation instructions carefully.

- Make sure that gaskets on doors fit tightly all around. If not, a hinge adjustment or a new gasket may be in order.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The gray skies of November surely make us think of the coming winter. My husband went to Tioga County for three days to hunt turkey. He saw none.

While he was gone, I gave the house a thorough cleaning. Over the summer months it merely got a weekly touch-up. The windows are my biggest problem as they remain slightly streaked — nothing seems to help.

After I'd finished baking, making pumpkin custard and rhubarb sauce, I decided to go fishing. Allen had picked up some lively night crawlers and they needed to be used.

We have a lot of river frontage but there is a brush along the edge. However, I finally found a nice place to fish from a small wharf. I parked my car and walked down to the water. While I was there at dusk, I saw a kingfisher. It has a harsh, rattling call and a ragged crest. There were also tame and wild ducks swimming together with wild geese flying overhead.

At first I did not even get a nibble, but then they began to bite, and I hated to quit. But when it was too dark to put the worms on the hooks, I knew that I had to take my bucket of six fish and head for home. Before I went to bed, I scaled and cleaned the fish. They may be a bit small, but they certainly taste good.

Last month when I took time to fish, I caught a really large fish. But as he got near the shore, he managed to get loose as I did not bring a net along. It was nice to know that fish of that size are in the river as I usually just catch panfish.

Spending an hour or more sitting along the Conestoga River watching the dead leaves float downstream is surely very different than my usually busy life at home. I have always enjoyed outdoors and nature.

Streams and Lakes

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is also known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible...a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well -- until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

NOW UPDATED

Stream Maps of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey Maryland/Delaware

Why every fisherman needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into... there's a sure way to up your odds... simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fishermen ever fish.

Professor Higbee's Stream Maps are the first and only highly detailed maps of their kind... showing virtually all of the streams, rivers and lakes in each state.

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Welcome to Lancaster Farming
Antiques Center.

This newly-developed center is for both passionate, professional collectors and amateur browsers yearning for a tie to the past.

Are you searching for a sturdy wooden corner cupboard with time-worn smoothness that flaunts detailed workmanship?

You know that signs of age add to the appeal of painted pieces, but where do you find that piece that will make your heart beat faster?

This weekly section will offer ideas of where to shop, what to collect, and what to buy. We plan to include weekly features that provide basic advice for finding the right piece for you and guidelines for negotiating for the right price.

Our articles will help you bring organization to a jumble of flea market finds. New life to an old lamp and novel ideas for using a copper kettle. Perhaps you love the feel of vintage fabrics, or you've found a tattered quilt, but don't know what to do with it. Learn how to drape it across a weathered chest or how to frame a salvaged piece of crazy quilt to look like a work of art.

We'll interview experts in the field who will teach you what to look for when buying an item, and how to combine items to create a focal point rather than jumbled disarray.

Do you prefer the simplicity of Shaker pieces, the sturdiness of farmhouse furniture that withstands the bumps of rearing a family, or the grandness of ornate mahogany?

No matter what your personal style, Lancaster Farming An- tiques Center will help you learn how to find and combine antiques and collectibles to create the look you desire.

Articles will feature ordinary collectors, shop owners and professionals who will show you what to look for when buying Florentine I Depression glass, tarnished brass, homespun linen, rare books, galvanized maple syrup buckets, toys, and other memorabilia.

Perhaps you ask, "What is an antique?"

lution (1820), but the baby boomers believe it's anything made before the 1940s.

We'll talk about whether it's more important to buy a piece of value or a piece you love.

If you know the thrill of finding an aged piece with character, then you'll want to refer to Lancaster Farming Antiques Center again and again.

Collector Enjoys Historical Stories Behind Antiques

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent
BELLEVILLE (Mifflin Co.) — When Forrest Kauffman of Belleville says there isn't much he doesn't know about antiques, he's not bragging.

Like John Wayne said in the movie True Grit, "No brag, ma'am. Just fact."

The "facts" are in his Belleville home's furnishings — rare one-of-a-kind and personally inscribed and dated antiques.

Because Forrest loves history, he knows interesting stories behind his antiques too. Most of the cupboards in the home, which he shares with his mother, Ruth A., were local pieces purchased in Big Valley. All are filled with pre-1820 dishes. Most have crocks atop.

"I like local history. That's why I collect a lot," Forrest explains, pulling a medium-sized crock from a cupboard.

"This is a sugar bowl. You can see the date and initials around the outside. When Abraham Peachey and Magdalena Zug of Belleville married in 1827, this jug was a wedding gift from her brother, Joel Zug, who made redware pottery on the Byler farm not too far from here. I bought it from an antique dealer."

Forrest moves next to a huge dry sink with two drawers in the upper right-hand corner. "My great-grandfather made this for an Amishman in White Hall and added the two drawers, but it was too fancy for the Amishman, so he wouldn't buy it."

Forrest's favorite collection of dishes is also his largest. It's a collection that fills more than four cupboards and includes rare pieces seldom seen before.

"This is my favorite," Forrest says, opening the cupboard door to reveal his display of "Seeing Eye" dishes. "They didn't call it 'Seeing Eye' when they made these. The proper way to display these are upside down."

Forrest has traveled throughout Pennsylvania and neighboring states to buy pieces of "Seeing Eye," and then purchased one man's collection of 117 pieces. Opening up another cupboard door, Forrest points to three rare "Seeing Eye" pieces. "I've never seen an oval vegetable dish, octagonal meat platter, or water pitcher." His collection of "Seeing Eye" includes more than 300 pieces.

"This is a Queen Anne tea table made before the 1800s. It has a tilt top with piecrust edges. Our kitchen table is a walnut slipper top table. The top lifts off. People were moving so much when this was made in the early 1800s. They were moving west."

From another cupboard Forrest carefully lifts out an Old Blue Shadow Dairy milk bottle, but not the size one would expect.

Forrest's Hepplewhite chest-on-chest dates to before 1820 and features French feet and inset detailing and beading.

"You can tell how old furniture is because it shrinks in width, not length," he comments while reaching behind the Hepplewhite chest to feel the horizontal boards that support each drawer. Each has shrunk at least an inch in from the back.

Forrest shares the history behind three ornately framed black and white portraits on the wall. The two photographs are of his grandparents and great-grandparents.

Pointing to the third, Forrest says, "This charcoal drawing is of my great-great-grandparents.

Forrest Kauffman's favorite pattern of dishes is called "Seeing Eye," a unique pattern that displays best upside down in order to see the "eye." His collection includes more than 300 pieces. Rare pieces of "Seeing Eye" include an oval vegetable dish, octagonal meat platter, and water pitcher.

They were some of the first Amish to form the settlement in Lawrence County. They didn't mind having pictures made of themselves. That (stipulation) was from the Mennonites who formed around the 1900s. Soon afterward, a Mennonite evangelist came through the area preaching against engraved images. A lot of pictures were destroyed after he came through. It was a shame."

Forrest maintains an extensive collection of locally made crocks. "Henry Glazier of Huntingdon County went out of business in 1855, Forrest says, pointing to a rare water pitcher. "It's amazing that stuff like this survived. This water pitcher came from a dealer in Wilmington. Makes you wonder how it got there."

Forrest also has many Lewistown Pottery pieces, including a teapot and a crock with the name Mrs. A. M. Dipple scratched into it with a nail.

Forrest's milk bottle collection includes bottles from area dairies J.R. Goss and J.T. Mitchell, Dry Valley; J.E. Sharp and John Y. Hostetler of Belleville; D. G. Arnold of Reedsville; Lauver and Letterman of Honey Creek; J.T. Rothrock, Bradford, F. G. Caldwell, and P.S. Shade (Pine Cottage Dairy) of Lewistown; and J.W. Kearns and Edward G. Kearns of Burnham.

"I'd like to collect one bottle from every dairy in Pennsylvania, but there's no list. I'll just find as many as I can find. It's just a challenge because I've heard that there are 49 different Lewistown milk bottles. Here's one from Pleasant View Stock farm in Tyrone. I've never seen another one. These amber bottles were used for less than a year. You couldn't see if they were clean so they stopped using them."

The joy of collecting antiques for Forrest is in sharing the history behind them. He relies extensively on sale information in Lancaster Farming and Joel Slater's Antique Weekly.

Forrest started collecting antiques 30 years ago, and now shows his collection each year during historical events and to the Penn State Early American Arts and Antiques class. He has been a member of the Kishacoquillas Valley Historical Society in Allensville for the past seven years and president for two.

"A lot of people are collecting now because of the Internet," Forrest explains. "I'm retired, and one of us is usually at home. I check the Internet and E-bay regularly for postcards, hunting and fishing licenses, milk bottle caps, and prices.

"It helps to know what people are paying for Bucher boxes, pencil post beds, and Chippendale dressers with locking drawers."

Forrest Kauffman of Belleville stands beside a Hep-plewhite chest-on-chest built before 1820.

Card Tables Have Been Around A LongTime

By Anne Gilbert

The card table of the 18th and 19th century are quite different than the cheaply made wood and folding metal style our mothers and grandmothers played cards on. There is no longer any trace of the elegance and fine cabinetry that went into early game tables. Like other fine period furniture, the best woods were used and they were meant to be seen...not folded and stored in a closet.

Since gambling and games were popular pastimes in 18th century England, to the wealthy and aristocracy, card tables were an important piece of furniture. So much so that several such tables could be found in a single equally popular in America.

Designed over the years in first the Queen Anne, then Chippendale, Hepplewhite, and Sheraton styles. American forms differed from the English versions in the type of foot, legs and styles of decorative motifs. The Queen Hepplewhite had folding tops so when open or closed, the top was finished.

Since there were few books in Colonial America, and little in the way of entertainment card games and gambling weren't considered a vice or a serious addition, but rather a life style. The card table played an important part. Women as well as men took part in game playing.

Because of their popularity, card tables were often made in pairs. Among the several basic styles were circular, tripod, square and pedestal tables.

were also made in Philadelphia, Baltimore and Massachusetts.

Clues: There are many ways not only to tell English from American card tables but who made them and where. It was the custom for them to be labeled with the maker's name. They can also be attributed to a certain region by the woods, veneering and style of carving.

Some of the tops of the Hepplewhite (Federal) style tables were made in the so-called "clover-leaf" pattern that consisted of five sections of circles of different sizes, giving a scalloped look. Duncan Phyfe, who is best known for his later lyre-pedestal designs, also made this type when it was in fashion.

The most common style used in Hepplewhite and Sheraton card tables was the square shape that folded into a rectangle. It had four legs. The front was veneered often in contrasting wood, such as satinwood. Inlays were used in the center, sometimes with patriotic motifs. Legs were straight or reeded.

Reproductions of the square Hepplewhite and Sheraton styles began to appear in the 1920s with phony maker labels glued on. The tip off was often when they stated that this was a numbered piece out of so many made. Another tip would be looking underneath for early saw marks and planning.

By 1810/15 the fashion was for the heavier Empire look, associated with Duncan Phyfe. These were on lyre or tripod bases. They often had gilt, animal paw metal feet.

Bases were often heavily carved.

By the mid Victorian 19th century, card tables continued to follow the fashions. Rococo revival called for rosewood. The folding tops were baize-lined.

In the early 20th century, the Art Nouveau style card table was being made by the Tobey Furniture Company in Chicago.

Hitting The Nail On The Head: Collecting Tools

Antique Roadshow
www.pbs.org

Would you be daunted if asked to mechanize the familiar straight wash board? The inventor of this item wasn't. It became the Lovell Family Washer, patented June 3, 1873 and manufactured by the Will Washer Co., of Erie, Pennsylvania. The washer would be placed over a tub of water, the garment to be washed worked back and forth with the crank, always holding on to a pinch of it before reversing the direction, until washed. Just for the record, these washers are almost always misidentified as a wringer. So now you know. -Pasto Agricultural Museum, Penn State University.

"Tools have a value in their own right," says Michael Flanigan, an antiques dealer out of Baltimore, and a former cabinet-maker himself. "People collect tools to use them; people collect them as art; and people collect them because they have a passion for the process."

Flanigan says that the most complex tools are often the most valuable. Drills and planes, for example, tend to be far more collectible than hammers and screwdrivers. The Stanley 55, a tool Flanigan describes as "the Rolls Royce of planes," can go for as much as $750-$1,000 or more when all of the plane's extras are sold as part of the package. However, the far less elaborate chisel tends to sell for $15-$25 a throw.

Flanigan says that collecting tools is no different than collecting other types of antiques. "The same rules apply," Flanigan says. "You're looking for the quality of a tool, its condition and its rarity."

"A few tools get sold in the $10,000-$20,000 range,"

Flanigan says. "But you can put together quite a unique and memorable collection while staying well under $500 for any individual item."

One thing sets tools apart from other antiques is that they are expected to be a little worn. "Tools were made to be used, and they were," Flanigan says. Over-used tools, however, are what the beginning collector should avoid. "You don't want a tool that was left out in the barn too long," Flanigan notes. Beginning tool collectors should also stay away from tools that have not changed over the years.

The design of this spoke shave, for example, has gone unchanged for nearly 150 years, making it difficult to tell when it was made and therefore less valuable.

Tool collectors, notes Flanigan, often specialize. A collector might gravitate towards the tools of a cooper, who made barrels, or those of a wheelwright, who made wheels. "In many cases, the tools outlasted the objects they made," says Flanigan, noting that few barrels have survived from the 19th century. "I expect that in the 21st century, we'll have people collecting car mechanics' tools."

Here we have the essentials of marketing eggs in days gone by. The metal kerosene lamp with the round mica-covered opening was used to candle eggs for cracks, possible embryonic development, spots, etc. one egg at a time. The funnel at right was used to concentrate the light on a suspect egg. Secondly, each egg was weighed on the scale, again one by one, to grade for size. Eggs then were carried in the six-dozen crate to the country store, for sale, or for barter. -Pasto Agricultural Museum, Penn State University.

This salesman's sample washer is about one-fourth scale. The full-size washer was made by M. C. Baughman, York, Pennsylvania, and first patented September 4, 1885. A salesman in a buggy in Centre County prior to the 1900's carried this scale model for implement dealer Charles B. McCormick, from State College. The salesman would take orders for a full-scale model. One enthusiastic owner considered "its inventor a philanthropist to the ladies." -Pasto Agricultural Museum, Penn State University.

Gehl Announces Skid Loader Winner

WEST BEND, Wis. — Jason Swanson of Russell, Pa. is the lucky winner of six month's use of a new Gehl Model 4635 skid loader. A drawing was held in conjunction with the Gehl exhibit at the 2000 Penn State Ag Progress Days.

Deere 2400 Chisel Plow Combines New Technology

The new 2400 Chisel Plow from John Deere has a floating hitch design, the choice of depth control, patented tube-through-tube framing, and TruPosition™ Cushion Standards.

Available in 10-foot to 64-foot widths, the four-bar frame stretches 134-inches, incorporating two 35-inch sections and a 64-inch section. The 35-inch sections offer maximum soil and residue mixing, while the 64-inch section offers room for residue flow. This design eliminates the need for a rockshaft, optimizing shank spacing and trash flow on high-yielding crops.

The floating hitch design provides consistent and accurate depth control, supported by front casting wheels and rear-wheel packages for both depth and transport positions. The tongue is connected to the chisel plow frame at two points, allowing the machine to follow the terrain independently of the tongue or tractor drawbar.

The 2400 Chisel Plow combines new technology to offer AccuDepth™, Floating Hitch, and TruPosition Standards in one piece of equipment. AccuDepth controls the primary and intermediate depths and side-to-side leveling from the operator's seat. Available as an option on three-section 2400 Chisel Plows and as standard equipment on five-section implements, AccuDepth's digital display shows depth in inches and bar segments to represent the individual frame sections. These sections can be individually adjusted to accommodate changes on-the-go from the cab.

The Positive Stop Depth control system offers depth control with variable width spacers conveniently locate next to each cylinder. Utilizing the proven double rephasing system, side-to-side leveling is accomplished by simply adjusting cylinder anchor brackets. Positive Stop Depth control is available only on three-section chisel plows.

With TruPosition Standards, the heavy-cast pivot assembly provides the base for the spring assembly, pivot joint, and front stop. Operators will notice significant savings from not having to replace shanks, since the shank is now separate and not part of the pivot joint, which results in longer-wearing standards.

"The 2400 Chisel Plow has the ability to control and change depth accurately and fast, which protects moisture reserves, increases speed, and adapts to varying field conditions on-the-go, in the cab," said Matt Weinheimer, marketing manager of tillage at John Deere.

Available as an option on three- or five-section chisel plows, the heavy-duty three-bar coil-tine harrow helps break up large chunks brought to the surface by the chisel plow while it levels the soil profile. The harrow's features include fully adjustable down-pressure, height, tine-tooth angle, and section tilt. The 22-inch-long coil tines provide maximum residue flow and soil-leveling capability. Now it's easier than ever to match field conditions by simply adjusting the height and down-pressure of the heavy-duty drawbar.

The 2400 Chisel Plow will be manufactured at the Des Moines Works plant in Ankeny, Iowa. Visit your local John Deere dealership to learn more about how the 2400 Chisel Plow can fit into your operation.

Bobcat Introduces Concrete Pump Attachment For Concrete Pouring

FARGO, N.D. — Bobcat Company, a business unit of Ingersoll Rand, announced the new Bobcat® Concrete Pump attachment for Bobcat 763, 773, 863, 873, and 963 skid-steer loaders and 864 compact track loaders.

The attachment is ideal for contractors who need to pump concrete to remote places or have small pumping jobs where a large pump truck may not be required. The compact pump unit measures just 101x51 inches, yet is capable of pumping concrete as far as 250 feet horizontally or two to three stories vertically. The attachment pumps up to 30 yards of mixed concrete per hour for fast, efficient pouring.

The Bobcat Concrete Pump attachment can be easily positioned in challenging job sites with a Bobcat skid-steer loader. Depending on the demands of the site, the loader may be attached on either side of the pump. The compactness of Bobcat equipment enables operators to maneuver in tight quarters, eliminating the need for the traditional muscle-powered wheelbarrow alternative. It also replaces dedicated tow-behind

The loader's hydraulic flow determines the concrete pumping speed. Standard-flow hydraulics will move approximately 15 to 18 yards per hour, and high-flow hydraulics can deliver up to 30 yards per hour. The pump hopper is covered with a grate to prevent oversized aggregate and unwanted debris from entering the pump. The hopper also has a cover which is opened for operation and helps to protect pump components from concrete splatter.

The Bobcat concrete pump has a durable, expanded-metal deck to prevent damage to valve components and the wash box, and allows easy access to all serviceable components.

Users are able to operate the Bobcat concrete pump attachment hydraulics from outside the loader with the Bobcat Remote Attachment Control kit. The control panel swivels, allowing operation from either side of the unit. The panel features a high-flow switch, allowing operators to start the pump on standard flow and then engage high flow once the concrete is flowing smoothly. An expanded metal walkway and grab handles on the concrete pump allow users to easily enter and exit the loader cab.

A trap door on the bottom of the hopper allows operators to easily clean the unit. The unit's pumping tubes can be cleaned by reversing the pump — which pushes leftover concrete back into the hopper — then using a regular garden hose or pressure washer to flush and clean them with water. The unit uses industry-standard pumping hoses and clamps.

NC+ First Company To Sign Use Agreement with Gustafson For Seed-Applied Insecticides

LINCOLN, Neb. — NC+ is the first seed company to sign an agreement with Gustafson LLC for use of their new seed-applied corn insecticides Gaucho and Prescribe.

"Because of their environmental and application advantages, there has been very strong interest from growers in Gaucho and Prescribe," NC+ President Larry Schuett said. "We have been offering Gaucho on grain sorghum to NC+ customers for the past few years and they have had great success with it. We wanted to be aggressive in offering the same advantages to corn growers as well."

Prescribe and Gaucho contain the same active ingredient (imidacloprid) that is precisely applied to each kernel of seed corn as the seed is conditioned for planting. This eliminates on-farm insecticide containers. Labor and application equipment associated with traditional planting time insecticides are also eliminated. Both products are nonrestricted-use pesticides.

"A specially designed computerized batch treater was installed in the recently completed NC+ Seed Conditioning and Distribution Plant at our Hastings, Neb. facility for the specific purpose of applying these new products," Schuett said. "It was an added cost but we knew it would add value to our products for our customer."

Gaucho protects germinating seed from the damage and stand loss caused by wireworms, seed corn maggots, imported fire ants, and other secondary insect pests.

Prescribe provides protection against northern, western, southern, and Mexican corn rootworms and wireworms, seed corn maggots, and imported fire ants. Prescribe also delivers protection against flea beetles that can transmit Stewart's Wilt, plus early season aphids and thrips known to transmit other crop diseases.

The new products protect against feeding insects through both contact and systemic activity. And because the seed is well-protected from the start, healthier, more vigorous plants are produced.

"Preliminary data we gathered from our field test plots near Hastings indicate a three percent yield advantage for corn hybrids that had been treated with Prescribe when compared to the untreated like hybrids," NC+ Director of Agronomic Services Bernie Trausch said. "Both the Gaucho and Prescribe plots had obvious visual advantages compared to the non-treated plant plots. They had more even stands, more plants survived and the root systems showed less damage. These are the types of things that led to higher yields."

Roundup Ready® Soybean System Reduces Input Costs

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Monsanto Company (NYSE:MON) announced that Monsanto's Bottom-Line Booster Guarantee gives growers an opportunity to try the Roundup Ready soybean system risk-free.

"Growers continually look for ways to reduce their input costs. One of the best ways to reduce input costs is by reducing tillage trips across the field," said Monsanto soybean market manager Kurt Rahe. "With high diesel prices and the Bottom-Line Booster Guarantee, it's a great time for growers to reduce their tillage and use the Roundup Ready soybean system for cost-effective weed control."

With fuel prices up over 75 percent since last summer, Rahe said reducing tillage can save up to $5.50 per acre in input costs. "Growers who reduce tillage passes and use Roundup® brand herbicide can reduce their overall inputs by up to $20 per acre," he said.

Thousands of growers have enrolled a minimum of 50 acres in the Bottom-Line Booster Guarantee, agreeing to compare Roundup Ready soybeans in reduced tillage to non-Roundup Ready soybeans with conventional tillage and herbicide programs. If profits from the increased Roundup Ready acres aren't equal to or higher than those from the conventional program, Monsanto will pay each qualified grower the difference on qualifying acres up to $10,000.

Almost half the growers contacted by telephone have enrolled in the program. Since early harvest has made it difficult to reach all growers, Monsanto is pushing back the sign-up deadline until March 31, 2001.

The Roundup Ready soybean system has three major components:

- Replace tillage with a prep ant burndown using Roundup brand herbicide.
- Buy Roundup Ready soybean seed from any authorized dealer.
- Spray approved Roundup brand herbicide over the top for proven crop safety.

The Bottom-Line Booster Guarantee is available in most of the Plains, Midwest and Northeast, except for certain counties in Missouri, Virginia, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Texas. For more details, complete eligibility requirements and program rules, contact your Monsanto representative or your agricultural retailer.

DAYCO SUPER II V-BELTS

Now there's a belt that beats the toughest drive problems.

Many heavy-duty industrial machines demand more than conventional wrapped v-belts can stand. Their punishing drives make ordinary belts crack under pressure. The result, unnecessary and expensive downtime.

Now there's a solution to the consistent, costly problem of replacing or retensioning belts. It's the revolutionary new Super II v-belt from Dayco. The Super II belt was designed specifically for the most brutal applications. And its performance blows the cover off conventional wrapped belts.

In heavy torque, high horsepower and extreme shock load comparisons, it's not even a contest. The Super II v-belt is stronger, more flexible, and lasts far longer.

Innovative design & construction provide extra strength and stamina.

The secret to the Super II v-belt's durability is its unique construction. The central portion of the polyester cords in the neoprene rubber core provides greater strength, balance and longer life. Multiple fabric plies, top and bottom, enhance flexibility. And Dayco's unique raw-edged construction gives it a better grip for controlled slippage.

Test the Super II v-belt on your toughest drive.

The Super II v-belt was field-tested for two years on the most severe applications: rock quarry shaker screens, lumber mill tree debarkers, and pipe descenders. In every case, it outperformed conventional wrapped belts by a wide margin. But the only test that really counts is the one you do on your own equipment.

Try the Super II belt on your toughest drive problem. You'll be so amazed by its incredible endurance that you'll want to put it on all your drives. In fact, we're so sure you'll be pleased with the performance of the Super II v-belt that in the unlikely event you're not satisfied, we'll refund the original purchase price, or replace it with a conventional wrapped v-belt. The Super II v-belt from Dayco. The super problem solver.

Dayco's unique raw edged belt sidewalls grip pulleys better, minimizing belt slip, noise and drive vibration.

Hi modulus polyester cord located in the belt mid section is specially treated to maintain extreme belt length & shock without stretching.

Multiple fabric plies relieve stress on the load-carrying center cord, allow greater flexibility. A belts have three plies, top and bottom. B belts have four and C belts have five.

Special 100% neoprene rubber compound supports cord more evenly top and bottom, dissipates heat more easily, and provides more oil, heat and ozone resistance.

NFO, DFA Finalize Common Marketing Agreement

AMES, Iowa — National Farmers Organization (NFO) and Dairy Farmers of America, Inc. (DFA) have finalized details and signed a common marketing agency agreement to jointly market NFO members' milk.

The agreement establishes a common marketing agency between the two organizations that includes marketing and management functions of NFO's dairy department.

"There is no question, both organizations benefit under this agreement," said NFO President Paul Olson. "Certainly, this is another step in the process of providing maximum market stability and price level to all dairy producers."

"The agreement is designed to increase efficiencies and decrease operating costs for the members of both organizations," said Gary Hanman, DFA president and chief executive officer. "During these times of low milk prices, working together like this in the marketplace is increasingly important to our dairy farm families."

Very little will change for NFO members under the agreement. Both NFO, a collective bargaining organization, and DFA, a dairy cooperative are national in scope.

"This agreement delivers tremendous efficiencies and marketing strength to our members," said Rodger Schlot-tach, director of NFO's dairy department. "NFO will service our members at lower costs, and the buyers we presently supply will continue to be supplied under this new marketing agency in common."

Tired of Cleaning out your Feed Bunks?

When utilizing less-than perfect feeds stuffs, conventional feed wagons allow your cattle to pick and choose what they like leaving an undesirable feed in your bunks. A Vertical TMR Cutter/Mixer/Feeder from New Direction Equipment will cut and blend your large or small, round or square bales of hay or silage into a TRUE Total Mixed Ration.

Rotation which is fluffy, palatable, readily eaten. The NDE Vertical Mixer not only eliminates waste in your bunks but it also eliminates the need for a tub grinder

The Performance, Power and

Reaching New Heights Depths

4"-6" ~ Disc Harrows

HARDPAN 10"-12"

Fall is the Best Time of the Year to Break Up the Hardpan.

Why is the DMI eco-til 2500 with No-Till shanks from Hooper becoming the ideal tillage tool for achieving greater yield and profit potential? Because the DMI eco-til 2500 breaks through the hardpan unlike conventional tillage tools. The result? The DMI eco-til 2500 with patented tiger-points provides excellent fracture of compaction to increase water absorption and air exchange for better nutrient flow up and down the soil profile and root system. This process provides warmer soil in the spring for earlier planting plus it delivers more uniform crop germination. And using the DMI eco-til 2500 with No-Till shanks results in even less soil disturbance than other deep tillage shanks.

We have DMI eco-til 2500 units in stock from 3-8 shanks. Call a Hooper salesman today for all your DMI needs.

The DMI eco-til 2500 ADVANTAGE

- Controls Compaction
- Increases Water Absorption and Air Exchange
- Provides Warmer Soil in Spring for Earlier Planting
- Achieves More Uniform Crop Germination
- Greater Yield and Profit Potential

Deer Creek understands the way you work. That's why we're here when you need us with parts and service 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Where you buy a product is often as important as what you buy!

Put us to the test! Service when you need it.

Match A Spreader To Your Needs

W Yourself 100 Thin

Get Unmatched Flexibility At A Great Price.

With eight sizes to choose from and a wide variety of options, it's easy to see how the New Idea® 3700 Series Spreaders meet the needs of any operation. Their aggressive, main beater paddles are strategically spaced and angled to shred a wide range of material while giving you a consistent spread pattern.

Culvert-grade galvanizing over one-piece, copper-bearing steel sides provide a barrier against rust and corrosion. And for hauling long distances, the truck-mount option proves to be the safest, most economical way to transport large amounts of material.

To see how simple it is to customize your spreading operation, contact your AGCO® New Idea dealer today. You'll be surprised how much time and money you'll save with the New Idea 3700 Series Spreaders.

Program Helps Position Ohio Pork Producers For The Future

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The pork industry is becoming driven by consumer demands for high quality, consistent, wholesome products. Creating a product that is just lean is not good enough any more, said Steve Moeller, Ohio State University Extension swine specialist.

"If producers want to fit into a value-added, niche market, they need quality," Moeller said. "People need a basic understanding of what goes on from the production level through the consumer level that influences quality as it relates to demand for product."

To help further the understanding of the changing pork industry, Ohio State University and pork industry collaborators are sponsoring Pork 509: Meeting the Need for High Quality, Consistent Pork Products in Ohio, Dec. 4-5, in the Animal Sciences Building on Ohio State University's Columbus campus.

The two-day program targets pork producers and people with an influence on the production of high quality pork. It is an opportunity for people to understand quality factors beyond lean meat, Moeller said. Pork 509 will address production at the farm, packing-plant and retail levels.

are:

- To improve the competitive position of Ohio pork producers through the marketing of high quality, consistent, wholesome pork products

- To explain carcass merit buying systems and factors influencing the price received for market hogs

- To provide an overview of pork muscle quality attributes affecting processing capability and consumer acceptability of pork, and discuss the management, environmental, nutritional and genetic factors that contribute to muscle quality deficiencies

- To provide an open forum where representatives of varied pork industry segments can discuss current and future issues that contribute to the quality, consistency and wholesomeness of pork

- To teach, through hands-on training, the differences in price and value at the farm, packing plant and retail levels.

Topics to be covered on Dec. 4 are live animal evaluation, ultrasound evaluation and demonstration, grid pricing, pork slaughter procedures, meat inspection, pork carcass fabrication, taste panel evaluation, and quality and the consumer. Areas scheduled for Dec. 5 are factors influencing muscle quality, measuring pork muscle quality, determining lean growth, microbiology and food safety, targeting the consumer, and processing strategies.

"Participants completing Pork 509 will have a better understanding of the numerous links in the pork chain between the producer and the consumer, and how the interaction of these links leads to profitability and competitiveness in the swine industry," Moeller said. "They will have the background and educational resources needed to make informed decisions, and the tools to help develop and share information among their peer groups."

A maximum of 30 people can sign up for the course. Spaces are available on a first-come, first-served basis. Registration for Pork 509 is $60 per participant and covers all meals, materials and parking arrangements. Registration is requested by Nov. 22.

For registration or additional information about Pork 509, contact Pat Rigby, Moeller or Henry Zerby through Ohio State University's Ohio Pork Industry Center at (800) 398-7675.

Manure Handling And Storage Facility Installation Under Way

SUNBURY (Northumberland Co.) — Construction is in progress for a waste handling and storage facility in East Chillisquaque Township, Northumberland County, for the Chester Solty's III dairy operation through the assistance of the Northumberland County Conservation District's (NCCD) Chesapeake Bay Program (CBP) and the USDA's Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP).

The structure will store wastes from 180 days of production and will replace an inadequately sized, unlined earthen storage.

According to George Phillips, NCCD bay technician, the existing storage facility was inadequate because of potential risk of groundwater pollution, human and animal safety for lack of a safety fence, and it required more frequent hauling of the manure.

The new system, while reducing the risk of the environment, will result in better use of the manure by allowing the manure to spread at times when the crop is able to use the nutrients from the manure.

Other best management practices (BMPs) being installed include barnyard regrading, paving, and curbing to control barnyard runoff; a reception pit with manure push-off for the collection of manure and runoff; and pumping to the storage structure. Roof gutters were installed to reduce the rainwater draining to the manure storage system.

Regional conservation district engineer Andrew Hibbs designed the system. Pam Richardson, Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) soil conservation technician, and George Phillips have oversight of the project for NRCS and NCCD.

For more information on the CBP and EQIP programs, contact George Phillips at the Northumberland County Conservation District office, (570) 286-7114, ext. 4.

Two Conservation Easement Purchases Completed On Northumberland County Farms

SUNBURY (Northumberland Co.) — The Northumberland County Agricultural Land Preservation Board (NCALPB) took the final step in purchasing agricultural conservation easements on two farms.

David Unger of Rush Township, NCALPB board chairman, announced that the closings were held in the office of Attorney Charles Saylor, Sunbury, for easements on the Patsy Truckenmiller farm and the Dale and JoAnn Lose farm, both in Delaware Township, Northumberland County.

The NCALPB was able to purchase the easement through funds provided by Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Farmland Preservation. As a result, these landowners have preserved their valuable farmland for agricultural production for perpetuity.

The Truckenmiller and Lose farms are the seventh and eighth farms to be preserved in Northumberland County. The Truckenmiller farm consists of 141.44-acres, and the Lose farm is 164.27-acres, bringing the total amount of farmland preserved in Northumberland County more than 988-acres. All eight Northumberland County easements were purchased entirely with state funds, for a total of $948,203.72 paid to landowners and $47,701.45 in incidental costs associated with the purchases. Northumberland County provides $5,000 annually for the NCALPB to administer the preservation program.

The NCALPB is in the process of purchasing easements on two more farms. Unger said, "We anticipate the other two farms will close early in 2001. We are also hoping the state will provide funds to be able to purchase several more in 2001, following our next round of ranking."

Supplemental funds awarded by the state made it possible for the NCALPB board to accomplish what they have in 2000. Unger said, "The farmland preservation program in Northumberland County continues to grow, and our board is quite optimistic about the future of the program."

The purpose of the farmland preservation program is to save quality farmland. Many acres of farmland are taken out of production in Pennsylvania on an annual basis as a result of residential and commercial development. The holder of the conservation easement has the right to prevent development or other improvements to the land for purposes other than agricultural production.

Anyone interested in the farmland preservation program in Northumberland County may contact Carolyn Badman at (570) 568-1942 or Dennis DiOrio at (570) 286-7114, ext. 4.

Crop Adviser Exam Registration Forms Available

EDGEWATER, Md. — Interested in becoming a certified crop adviser? Registration forms for the Feb. 2 Mid-Atlantic Certified Crop Adviser (MACCA) exams are available.

The exams will be offered in Richmond, Virginia, Annapolis, Maryland, and Charleston, W.Va. The sign-up deadline is Dec. 15.

The Mid-Atlantic Certified Crop Adviser Program covers crop advisers operating in New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia.

The MACCA exams are part of the International Certified Crop Adviser (ICCA) Program, a nationally recognized, voluntary certification program developed through the collaborative efforts of the public sector and the agricultural industry to ensure high standards for crop advisers. Local programs are administered by state or regional boards in association with the American Society of Agronomy, which handles similar programs for specialists in agronomy, crop consulting, weed science, and other agricultural disciplines. It is intended for anyone who makes nutrient, pesticide, crop, or environmental recommendations to producers, including dealers, distributors, applicators, consultants, manufacturers, allied industries, and state and federal agency personnel.

To date, 236 individuals have passed the rigorous six hours of exams and become certified in the Mid-Atlantic region.

To become Mid-Atlantic CCA certified, an applicant must:

- Have at least two years of crop advising experience with a bachelor's degree in agriculture, three years of crop advising experience with an associate degree in agriculture, or have a minimum of four years of crop advising experience post high school.

- Provide employer and client reference.

- Pass a national and the two MACCA regional exams.

- Sign a code of ethics.

To remain certified, a member must participate in 40 hours of continuing education during a two-year period with a minimum of 10 hours in any one year, and undergo an audit biannually by the MACCA Board to verify continuing educational and adherence to the code of ethics.

As a Mid-Atlantic certified crop adviser, an individual must receive continuing education credits for a wide variety of agricultural topics.

"The program helps demonstrate that the agricultural industry prides itself on high standards of professionalism and knowledge," said Louise Lawrence, chair of the MACCA.

Lynne Hoot provides administrative services for the MACCA program and can be reached at (410) 956-5771. For registration materials for the MACCA exams, contact Michele Welsh (608) 273-8080, before the Dec. 15 deadline for the Feb. 2 exam.

Emerging Alternatives To Land Application Of Manure — Will There Be Enough To Go Around?

GEORGETOWN, Del. — The Delmarva Peninsula might not have enough poultry manure to meet demand for several projects that offer alternatives to land application of manure. That possibility was raised recently during a Baltimore area research symposium.

Bill Satterfield, executive director of Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc., (DPI), the trade association for the broiler chicken industry on the Delmarva Peninsula (Delaware, Eastern Shore of Maryland, and Eastern Shore of Virginia) described several projects that are under way or being planned. He questioned whether there would be enough manure for these projects and manure's continuation as a fertilizer source for hundred of farmers. It is estimated that chickens on the Delmarva Peninsula produce approximately 600,000 to 800,000 tons of manure annually.

On the Delmarva Peninsula, at least four projects are under way or being considered.

Perdue Farms Inc. and AgriRecycle, Inc. have formed a partnership to construct a manure-to-pellet plant in Sussex County, Del. This facility will produce pellets that can be exported and used by Midwest farmers who grow corn fed to Delmarva's chickens. This facility is expected to use 80,000 tons of manure annually, or about 13 percent of the broiler chicken manure produced on Delmarva each year.

Allen Family Foods, Inc. is planning to operate a gasification co-generation plant at its Hurlock, Md. chicken processing plant. Power not used by the processing plant will be sold to electricity purchasers. This facility will use about 40,000 tons per year, or about 6.5 percent of the local chicken manure.

Eastern Shore Forest Products, Inc. of Salisbury, Md. is developing a total litter management system that includes shipping manure off of Delmarva, burning manure to generate energy for a company operated manure-to-fertilizer plant, and setting up one-to-10 megawatt power plants that will be located adjacent to poultry company facilities. These projects will use at least 85,000 tons of chicken manure annually, at least 13 percent of the locally produced manure.

In addition, a British company called FibroShore is working to construct a large-scale manure-burning power plant on Maryland's Eastern Shore. Electricity would be sold to the highest bidder. This facility could use up to 350,000 tons of manure annually; approximately half of what is produced on Delmarva.

Satterfield pointed out that because of advances in feeding programs and new corn varieties, chickens may excrete less phosphorus in the years ahead, thus making more farmland available for manure utilization. Additionally, commercial products that bind phosphorus to the soil and the recently developed phosphorus index could expand the number of acres of farmland that can use manure in an environmentally safe manner.

Not included in the summary of alternative uses are smaller projects that use chicken manure compost and as growing media for flowers and nursery crops.

Satterfield concluded by stating, "Wouldn't it be ironic if Delmarva did not have enough manure to meet all these demands after so many people were critical about the alleged oversupply of manure?"

You're Invited To Be Part Of The Mid Atlantic Area's 2001 AG DIRECTORY

This exclusive publication will serve as the ultimate resource guide for county agents and state agricultural agencies, and also serve as a "Yellow Pages" for farmers all across the Mid Atlantic.

The 2001 Ag Directory, will be included in Lancaster Farming's total circulation, and be distributed at the Pennsylvania and Keystone Farm Shows. That's more than 55,000 booklets in circulation! This Directory is the only one of its type to be distributed in this area.

Waterbeds for Cows

12 Year Limited Warranty

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 12-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

ALANTA
A member of the Poly group of companies. Patent Pending.

BEEF TIPS

"I have seen more improvement in the Simmental breed in the past 5 years than from any other beef breed"

Cliff Orley of Lebanon, Pennsylvania
Owner, Keystone Cattle Service
1999 Judge at Denver Cattle Show
1997 pen of bulls judge at Denver Show

Improvement is by design, not accident

Simmental breeders and members of the American Simmental Association, through a long term relationship with geneticists and animal scientists at Cornell University, have developed a unique to the industry reporting/recording system that, with the help of computer generated data, increases the probability of breeding profitable beef animals. Goals of the Simmental EPD (expected progeny difference) system include: CE (high calving ease), BW (low birth weight), WW (high weaning weight), YW (high yearly weight), MCE (ability for heifers and cows to calf easy), MM (maximize milk to ensure growth of calves), and MWW (weaning weight of the daughters' calves).

Attention Dairy, Swine & Poultry Producers! New Products Now Available...

With the addition of our new soybean processing facility, we now offer these products to meet your nutritional needs. Manufacturing these products ourselves allows us to utilize locally grown soybeans and support our local agricultural community!

GOLDEN PRO 46 XP

This natural, mechanically extruded and expelled soybean product is experiencing great acceptance with local dairymen. A course golden colored meal with a 6% fat content, Golden Pro 46 XP is extremely palatable. Golden Pro 46 XP is a natural way to bring the value of high by-pass protein into diets that require a lower fat level.

GOLDEN MEAL 40

An 18 percent fat content along with a 40 percent crude protein makes this mechanically extruded meal product a valuable component in a variety of rations. Full fat content gives you a high level of digestible energy, while high temperature extruding ruptures the oil cells for better nutritional absorptions.

CRUDE SOYBEAN OIL

A product of Keystone's expelling process, this oil can be used in a wide variety of on farm applications. A natural alternative to animal fats, this oil provides needed energy in various rations.

To make these products available, and to help you utilize your home raised soybeans Keystone Mills announces its

Soybean Exchange Program

As manufacturers and distributors of Golden Pro 46 XP and Golden Meal 40, we are anxious for you to try our products. We are offering a soybean exchange program featuring these quality nutritional products
